—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.

HOMER GUCK, publisher of the Herald-Examiner, and Mister alias "Babe" Meigs are at the railroad station to tell you that Chicago has a California climate. It has for the time being, the wind blowing from Lake Michigan being as mild as though it came across the Gulf of California.

Marvelous, if only lasts, as the Frenchman said passing the eighth floor, having fallen from the twentieth.

On the Chicago American front page is a photograph of a man crumpled up on the floor of an automobile, a big policeman looking in. The body, with a bullet in the abdomen, is that of George Smith, burglar, who will burgle no more.

In the Wiebolt department store robbery, Policeman Binder, shot down, fired upward from the floor and was quite sure he hit somebody. Sure enough, it was this man, left to die in the abandoned automobile by his companions.

There you see the beginning of Chicago's fair to open in 1933, celebrating a century of progress.

MR. RUFUS C. DAWES, president and mainspring of the enterprise, shows you the fair buildings on the lake front with Chicago's skyscrapers for a background, and only five minutes from the Hotel Centre, already well underway.

Fort Dearborn, in which the whites found protection from Indians, is recreated exactly as it was, made of logs in the old style, with convenient holes for shooting Indians.

Here is a low stockade over which the Indians could easily climb. Having climbed, they found themselves trapped between two fences, the second very high, which made shooting them convenient.

Inside the fort is a little church, also convenient, in which prayers were offered for the repose of red souls, that had passed on.

THE ADMINISTRATION building, in modernistic style, has strange high lines, tables wide at one end, narrow at the other, fantastic concealed lights, columns of polished aluminum reaching from ceiling to floor. That will attract artists, architects and others "tired of copying old things."

The transportation building, a thousand feet long, will make it possible for Westerners that never saw the ocean to see in exact reproduction part of a full-size ocean liner.

AT ONE END of it is a dome of steel, widest in the world, nearly 200 feet across, three times as wide as that of the Capitol of Washington, wider than the dome of St. Peter's. Under it will stand the "Rocket," under it will stand the Rocket, motive, generously len by the British government.

THE LAKE front location of the fair already possesses permanent structures that should draw intelligent families from all over the United States, thanks to the generosity and civic pride of Chicago citizens who believe in big things.

At the entrance to the fair park stands a beautiful fountain. It cost $1,000,000 to build, and the giver endowed it with another $1,000,000 to keep it in good condition.

To the right is the magnificent museum that Marshall Field gave to Chicago, one of the finest buildings in the United States. It cost $10,000,000, and many millions are spent on its collections.

Two hundred years ago he might have given his millions to purchase a passport to heaven. The modern plan is to be remembered by fellow citizens, and take things as they come beyond the cemetery.

ON THE EDGE of the lake, a great round building contains the "planetarium," of which a duplicate should exist in every self-respecting city, for the education of high school boys and girls especially.

In that planetarium lectures are given three times a day. The interior of the large dome reproduces in miniature the vault of heaven showing planets and stars, all the movements of the heavenly bodies. The stars and planets appear gradually as the light fades and twilight deepens.

THIS COSMIC SCHOOL, in which a child of 10 can be made to understand astronomy, has already been visited by more than 600,000 men, women and children of Chicago.

It will be visited by many more millions during the exposition of 1933.

Make your plans to visit Chicago in that year, the one hundredth anniversary of Chicago's chartered existence.

VANDERBILT FACES CALL AT TRIAL

By EARL L. SHAUB, Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler today was to continue his high-speed preparations for his last-ditch fight in court-martial proceedings against him because he repeated in a speech a story reputedly told him by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.

The story was that Premier Mussolini, of Italy, ran over a little girl with his automobile and sped on without stopping.

It is possible Vanderbilt will be called as a witness for Butler.

Another witness may be the Rev. Dr. Frederick R. Griffin, who was chairman of the Philadelphia meeting at which Butler made his now famous speech. The pastor said last night the speech was a "genial, kindly, friendly address, delivered in a jocular manner."

TECHNICAL PRISONER

Although the battling Marine is a technical prisoner in the barracks at Quantico, Va., he called upon John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for president in 1924, and Maj. Henry Leonard, an old friend, to undertake his defense. At the same time, the Navy announced the members of the court-martial board.

Davis had not yet committed himself, but Leonard swung into action, began a study of the case, and called into conference Col. J. J. Meade, Lieut. Col. P. F. Archer and Brig. Gen. Randolph C. Berkeley, who has succeeded Butler as commandant at Quatico.

The four men were closeted for hours, while the peppery Butler

Heroic Fireman Was First 'Love' Of Alma Rubens

By ALMA RUBENS.

CHAPTER II.

My loved one was a fireman attached to a station near our house on McAllister, street. I was about 12 at the time, I think I was drawn to him principally because of a hideous red scar that traversed his right cheek from temple to the point of his jaw, acquired, perhaps, while helping conquer the terrible conflagration which followed the earthquake.

Miss Rubens

Even now, when I recall his image in my mind, that mysterious, livid scar awes me into adoration and makes me feel quite goose-fleshy with thrills.

Anyhow, his appearance enamored me into excesses of conjecture not always strictly prudish.

I decided to marry him. He was my man! And I set out to capture him.

When in his presence the overpowering eloquence of my blazing inner flame rendered me mute, languishing and frightened. Audacious, long-legged romp that I was, the instant I would sight him I would concentrate my energies and strut past, breathlessly and self-conscious.

Then into the darkened concealment of a neighborhood telephone booth, providing I had a nickel, I would pester him with artfully disguised voice, punctuating my ardorous advances with exaggerated, deep-throated sighs, which I imagined represented the very quintessence of virginal passion.

"What d'ye say your name was?" he would growl over the wire.

Poses as Actress

"Rose La France, the actress," I would invariably reply, affecting a high hauteur, often broken by an irresistible desire to burst into giggles. "Rose La France. And I'm head over heels in love with you."

And, as invariably, when I had reached this point, my hero would

FIRE IN 'HILL' MINE BURNS 3 HOUSES

Policeman, Fireman Hurt In Battle to Extinguish Blaze From Abandoned Pit

A fire in an abandoned coal mine in the Hill District today was blamed for the destruction of three vacant frame houses at 2249-2251 and 2253 Wylie avenue terrace. A policeman and a fireman were injured in the blaze which routed three occupants of 2257 Wylie avenue terrace. Fire Chief Richard L. Smith estimated the damage at $10,000.

Two alarms were sounded when it was feared that the flames would spread to other houses in the terrace. A high wind sent the flames roaring through the vacant structures, and firemen battled for more than four hours before extinguishing the fire.

TWO MEN HURT

Patrolman Robert Richman, of Center Avenue Police Station, was burned on the neck when he rushed into the dwelling at 2257 Wylie avenue terrace, believing that a man was asleep in the house. Hoseman Thomas Greelish, of No. 4 Engine Company, was cut on the right hand and left foot. The men were treated at the Mercy Hospital. J. Van Durham, his wife, Mattie, and J. B. Durham, Negro occupants of the dwelling at 2257 Wylie avenue, were routed. Their home was only slightly damaged.

Fire Chief Smith said that several times recently firemen have been compelled to pour water into the mine beneath the houses to temporarily stay the flames.

DROUGHT BLAMED

The drought and the nearness of the flames to the foundations of the buildings are believed to have resulted in combustion in the basement of the dwelling at 2251 Wylie avenue terrace where the fire originated. S. M. East, a former occupant of one of the houses in the terrace declared that three times within the last three weeks, firemen have been called out to extinguish small fires caused by the burning mine.

Fire, believed due to an overheated furnace, damaged the home of Mrs. Mary Matthews, 812 Hays street, Homestead, late yesterday. The damage was estimated at $1,500.

PLANE ENDS FIRST LAP OF OCEAN FLIGHT

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—The German seaplane DO-X landed in the harbor here at 3:10 p. m., (10:10 a. m. Pittsburgh time).

The big ship settled down in the harbor with a great roar of motors which brought everybody within hearing distance to the waterfront. She had completed this first lap of her projected flight across the South Atlantic in almost exactly seven hours.

Fog between Lisbon and the Madeira Islands made a change in her original plans and Commander Friedrich Christiansen, instead of dropping a mail bag at Funchal, as he had intended, eliminated the Madeira detour and came straight here.

A radio message sent an hour before the arrival said that the trip was proceeding on schedule without untoward incident.

HOPS FROM PORTUGAL

LISBON, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—Setting out on an 11,500-mile flight to New York via the South Atlantic and Brazil, the DO-X, giant German 12-motored flying boat, took off from Lisbon water at 8:08 o'clock (3:08 a. m. Pittsburgh time) this morning.

Her first scheduled stop is Las Palmas, Canary Islands, 930 miles to the southwest.

Capt. Horst Merz, chief pilot, was at the controls as Capt. Friedrich Christiansen, master of the ship, gave the signal for the departure. Lieut. C. H. Schildhauer, American assistant pilot, was ex-

PITTSBURGHER FALLS SUICIDE

A man whose body was taken from the waters of Niagara Falls after he had sent a bullet through his brain and toppled over into the rapids was identified early today as H. I. MacClay, 60, of Pittsburgh. Identification was made by a nephew.

MacClay, according to the nephew—Irwin Cannon, of Niagara Falls, N. Y.—had been a resident of Pittsburgh for the last 30 years and was a former employe of the United States Steel Corporation at Munhall. For the last few years he had lived at Webster Hall.

He had been in ill health.

Actress Recovering Following Operation

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Charlotte Merriam, film actress, was reported recovering today from an emergency appendicitis operation. She was taken to a hospital from the train on which she arrived here Thursday night, with other actresses to participate in the San Francisco automobile show.

FINED IN ATTACK ON CENSUS MAN

An East Liberty census taker was attacked and beaten after he had been refused census information last night by a taxicab driver.

Charles A. Painter, 35, the accused driver, of 5427 Howe street, was fined $25 or 30 days in the workhouse this morning in East End Police Court as the aftermath of the affair. He paid the fine.

E. L. Marshall, the census enumerator, of 925 South Aiken avenue, testified he went to Painter's apartment residence and knocked on the door. He continued:

"When Painter appeared he told me to 'get the hell out of here,' tried to seize my book and folio, then shoved me through the door. As I turned to leave he struck me, followed me downstairs and shoved me through the outside door. Then he followed me across the street, hit me, and knocked me down."

Painter denied the charges and said he told Marshall to return during the day.

James S. Routley, superintendent of the census here, was present at the hearing and took testimony. He said he would report the case to Washington and would prosecute Painter if government officials ordered him to do so.

STEUBENVILLE BLOCK BURNS

STEUBENVILLE, O., Jan. 31.—Fire of undetermined origin early today swept the Sarratt Turnbull business block here with a loss estimated at a quarter million dollars, Steubenville's worst fire in 10 years.

A two-story brick and stone building erected for the now defunct A. A. Adams Stores Corporation was destroyed by the flames, which gave four fire companies a three-hour fight. The blaze, fanned by high winds, threatened neighboring business houses. The building is owned by Benjamin Bothrock, of New York City, and the loss is largely covered by insurance.

The Kirby Shoe Company and the Rogers Jewelry Company suffered the heaviest stock loss. Other firms suffered loss through smoke and water. Officials began an investigation this forenoon. The fire is believed to have started in a second-story space occupied by an indoor golf course.

HUNDREDS RUSH TAX DEADLINE

With thousands of dollars of taxes yet unpaid, hundreds crowded the City Treasurer's office in the City-County Building today as the deadline approached for canceling discounts offered for prompt settlement.

City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley announced late yesterday the office would remain open tonight until 8 o'clock to accommodate throngs of taxpayers who have milled through the City Hall corridors all this week.

Beginning Monday and continuing until April 1, water, city and school taxes will be accepted by the treasurer at face value. After April 1 they automatically become delinquent if not paid and a 2 per cent penalty, plus ½ per cent interest carrying charges, are added.

After an extended period, the treasurer pointed out, if the taxes remain unsettled, liens will be placed against properties. Liens prevent properties being sold or debts satisfied until the taxes are taken care of.

Beginning Monday, February 2, all editions of the Sun-Telegraph will be printed on white paper.

NUMBER RACKET NEAR CRISIS

As Monday—the day the "numbers" racket must have a new basis for its business—draws near, the muddled lottery situation was summarized about like this today:

Leading operators fear 12 months may be needed to bring the racket back to its pristine glory, if a new basis is found.

It was acknowledged the new number must be one that is vital to commerce or industry and is issued daily.

Crowd at Chaplin Picture Premiere Battle Police

The talkies yielded the spotlight to the first important non-dialogue movie Hollywood has produced in three years, and a little pantomiming tramp proved to the satisfaction of a first-night audience his art—pure pantomime—was beyond the need of microphonic assistance.

The occasion was the showing of "City Lights," the picture on which Charles Chaplin, alone of all Hollywood to ignore the talkie revolution, has been working nearly three years.

Thousands assembled before the theater and police had to battle to keep back the crowds.

Aimee Going to Birthplace Of Daughter in China

HONOLULU, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Traveling under the name of Mrs. F. W. Poate and Miss Isabel Poate, Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, and her daughter, Roberta, spent yesterday touring and shopping in Honolulu, and departed last night for Shanghai without admitting their identity.

Despite the statements of passengers on the steamship President Wilson, on which she arrived here, Mrs. McPherson denied her identity. Passengers said she had announced prior to her arrival she would change to her correct name after leaving Honolulu.

The ship's crew denied the evangelist was aboard during the 12 hours it was in port.

Passengers said Mrs. McPherson is going to Shanghai to see the birthplace in China of her daughter, who was born when her father and mother were missionaries there.

FINANCIAL HEADS HIT PLAN

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Support for immediate cash payment of the soldiers' bonus has gathered such tremendous momentum in Congress, that powers in the financial world were today being marshalled by its foes to fight the proposition.

Following the attack upon the proposal by Secretary Mellon, J. Herbert Case, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and Roy A. Young, formerly governor of the Federal Reserve Board and now governor of the Boston Federal Reserve Bank yesterday testified before the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Federal Reserve System will have to raise its rediscount rates in order to protect its position should Congress pass the bill to pay off the veterans, Young said.

WARNS OF SLUMP

Business will be temporarily stimulated by the distribution of cash to the veterans, but it will be short-lived and depression worse than the country is now in will follow, Young predicted. He doubted whether the government could sell all the bonds required to make the payment.

Immediate cash payment through issuance of a large amount of government bonds would cause "grave if not insurmountable difficulties" for the business world, Case declared.

Already fear of such an influx of bonds has caused the bond market to drop, and it will go down still further, should Congress authorize a big bond issue, he predicted.

In order to raise the money to pay off the war veterans it would be necessary for the government to make an attractive interest rate on the bonds. Should the outlay be $1,000,000,000, a rate of 4 per cent would be necessary; $2,000,000,000 would require a rate of 4¼ per cent, and for more than that amount the government would have to pay 4½ per cent, he said.

BOND MARKET THREAT

Automatically upon the arrival of these new bonds bearing higher interest rates, there would be a readjustment of prices for governmental and other bonds now outstanding, he argued.

Outstanding Treasury bonds would decline 8 to 10 per cent as a result of a new 4 per cent bond issue of large proportions, and if the rate were 4½ per cent, the drop would be 13 to 17 per cent, he said.

In dollars on the first basis the depreciation would amount to $450,000,000, and $1,000,000,000 in case the rate were 4½ per cent, he said.

To pay the veterans the cash value of their certificates as of date of maturity, 1945, it would be necessary to issue $3,500,000,000 in bonds. Thus any amount lower than that would mean a compromise on this proposition.

Oakmont Body Backs Installment Bonus

Senators David A. Reed and James J. Davis and Congressmen John Garner and Clyde Kelly today were to be sent telegrams that the directors of the Oakmont Chamber of Commerce favored a proposal that veterans compensation certificates be converted into 12 or more monthly installments rather than in one payment. The directors at a meeting last night said they believed the plan should prove more beneficial than the single payment idea.

Tree Chopper Tells Truth; Must Pay $75

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—It may be that William Cozen had the story of George Washington and the cherry tree in mind when he came before Judge Francis Allegretti in boys' court. Referring to the playgrounds tree he had hacked down, he said:

"I did it all right. We wanted to clear the place for a baseball game."

The damage was estimated at $75 which the Judge said Cozen could pay by April 28 or go to jail.

2 Burned to Death In Auto Collision

BALTIMORE, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Two unidentified white men were burned to death early this morning following the collision of two automobiles in the northwestern part of the city. One of the cars was a private vehicle and the other owned by a rental company. Police said after the crash the private car sped away.

Job Relief Fund May Give Hoover Camp Scenic Road

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Emergency employment construction contemplated by the National Park Service would provide President Hoover with an optional scenic route to his summer camp in the Virginia mountains.

The park service has put aside $250,000 of its $1,500,000 share in the $116,000,000 relief appropriation for the road, but awaits congressional authorization for the expenditure contained in the pending deficiency measure.

The road, 20 miles long, would be a unit of the Skyline Highway the park service hopes to put through the proposed Shenandoah National Park.

It would run from the marine camp at the Hoover lodge to Panorama, Va., on the Blue Ridge Mountain divide, near Luray.

The passengers are Max Sauev and Hans Stadhagen, technicians of the Condor Syndicate; Maj. Giacomo Brenta, Italian aviator; Stanislov Krakov, representing Jugo-Slav air interests; Capt. Fritz Hammer, German air ace and director of the Condor Air Mail, and Admiral Gago Coutinho, of the Portuguese navy.

The first four will leave the ship at Las Palmas. Capt. Hammer and Admiral Coutinho alone continuing all the way across the South Atlantic. Admiral Coutinho carries greetings from the Portuguese government to the Brazilian government.

HUGE GASOLINE SUPPLY

Seven thousand gallons of gasoline and 600 gallons of oil were in the DO-X tanks at the hop-off. Five extra fuel tanks have been installed on the passenger deck to provide space for sufficient fuel for the long hop between Porto Praia, Cape Verde Islands, and Fernando do Noronha, the longest projected hop, a distance of 1,500 miles.

Ample supplies of food were carried in the larder for serving two meals on the first stage of the flight, which should not require more than 12 or 15 hours. Passengers had access to an American bar where anything from German beer to French champagne and Scotch whisky could be bought. Members of the crew will not be allowed to indulge, as Capt. Christiansen has decreed they must be prohibitionists while in flight.

Latest reports indicated the ship should have faborable weather on the first lap. At Las Palmas the ship will await favorable weather reports before hopping for Porto Praia, Cape Verde Islands, the next stop. But it is hoped that the delay at Las Palmas will not be more than two days.

PLANE'S ROUTE

From Porto Praia the projected route is as follows: Porto Praia to Fernando do Norohna, 1,500 miles; Fernando do Norohna to Natal, Brazil, 150 miles; Natal via Bahia, to Rio de Janeiro, 1,475 miles; Rio de Janeiro return to Natal, 1,475 miles; Natal via Pan-American Airways route to Miami, with several stops, 3,800 miles; Miami to New York, 1,400 miles.

No effort will be made to hurry the flight, which is considered experimental to test the serviceability of large heavier-than-air craft for commercial Trans-Atlantic flying. Even if the flight is successful it may be at least a month before the giant ship is seen in New York.

NUMBER RACKET NEAR CRISIS

enced by the New York Stock Exchange.

The dice and wheel as indicants of the "number" were found wanting after trial. Public confidence was scanty.

The United States Weather Bureau temperature reports from 51 cities looked best, although the system of combining columns and adding was feared too complicated for the average gambler.

Some pessimists claimed—and many business men, it is said, hoped—that the public was watching the lingering death of a once-enormous racket, with gross daily receipts, in its hey-day, of more than $100,000 in Western Pennsylvania.

The hesitation over the New York system of taking two figures from the daily customs house report and one figure from the treasury totals originated in the knowledge that the reports, when published, are 48 hours old. It was generally feared shrewd gamblers, out to "break the books," would finds ways of determining the number in time to play it before the books closed.

A final decision, which may determine whether the racket is to live or die, will be made, it is predicted, within a day or two. One more change, it is admitted, may kill the business.

Weather Conditions.

The disturbance that appeared over the Great Lakes yesterday morning moved very rapidly eastward. It is centered off the New England Coast, producing cloudy weather along its path, but only light precipitation. In Northern Pennsylvania and Western New York the temperature dropped to from 12 to 16 by 8 a. m. It is somewhat colder than yesterday over the northern plains and the Canadian Northwest, but the temperatures are still much above the seasonal normal.

CONGRESS MAPS FOOD RELIEF BATTLE

Extra Session Looms as Both Blocs Cry No Compromise On $25,000,000 Measure

By WILLIAM S. NEAL,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Congress today was a house divided against itself, with Senate and House locked in what may be a finish fight over the Robinson $25,000,000 food relief amendment.

"No compromise" became the battle cry of a large bloc in both chambers of Congress. Some Republican leaders cast about for a means to avert the forcing of a special session after March 4.

Another step in the long-drawn-out quarrel was scheduled today with Senate and House conferees attempting to ease the differences of the two bodies.

The Senate is on record by a big majority for the appropriation of $25,000,000 for relief in drought areas and industrial centers, the relief to be administered by the Red Cross, or if it persists in refusing to handle the fund, by the Salvation Army or other agencies.

HOUSE BACKS HOOVER

The House demonstrated it is still standing by President Hoover when it defeated, 217 to 151, a motion to agree to the $25,000,000 fund, the fund to be administered by the President or Red Cross.

Declaring Congress cannot end its labors March 4 until December without bolstering the charitable organizations now caring for hundreds of thousands in drought areas and more in cities, Senator Robinson (Dem.), of Arkansas, stood ready to force a special session to accomplish his purpose.

And to this Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican leader of the House, replied:

NO COMPROMISE

"This is a matter of principle. For me there is no compromise. If the government appropriates money for private charity, we kill the private charitable organizations of the nation."

Senator Moses (Rep.), of New Hampshire, also replied belligerently to the Robinson ultimatum, saying:

"When you have an ultimatum it usually means war or surrender. It looks like a question of whether we accept the amendment to avoid an extra session."

PERSHING ASKS FOOD RELIEF

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—A picture of proud and independent people — American farmers—poverty-stricken and in dire need as a result of widespread drought conditions was drawn last night for a nation-wide radio audience by Gen. John J. Pershing in a plea for subscriptions to the Red Cross $10,000,000 relief fund.

Speaking over a National network, the World War commander said families have been found "whose sole subsistence for weeks has been corn meal and lard." He added:

"Some are existing largely on herbs, roots, nuts and wild honey. Kitchens are reported cold because there is nothing to cook for meals and no fuel to burn.

"There are thousands of Americans upon whom this cumulative misery has descended. The responsibility for lifting it rests upon the American Red Cross. This means that it rests upon you and upon me."

The total received up to today in the $10,000,000 campaign was $4,475,983, the Red Cross reported, and some 20,000 persons were added to those being fed. The total receiving aid is 721,211 persons living in 701 counties in the drought area.

BUTLER DRAFTS DEFENSE

MUSSOLINI SATISFIED

While Butler was developing his fight, Premier Mussolini, whose protest to the State Department brought about the order for the court-martial, cabled his ambassador here that the apology by the State Department was satisfactory and that so far as he is concerned "the incident is closed and forgotten."

One of the main questions is whether the hearings will be closed or open to the public. Because of the international aspect in this case, however, it is felt that the State Department may file a request that the hearings be closed. It was pointed out that testimony may be produced which, if published to the world, may prove embarrassing.

It is pointed out that if some witness should swear that Mussolini had run down a child with the remark: "What is one life in the affairs of a state?" it would be printed around the world, and again strain the relations between the two countries.

CONDUCT CHIEF ISSUE

Such testimony, even if proved, would not help Butler's cause, it was said. The court-martial will not be concerned with the truth of his remarks, but with his conduct in making them.

Instead of facing the necessity of proving his remarks, Butler's defense will be an effort to prove he had the right to make them.

The State Department's apology to the Italian government was denounced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Heflin (Dem.), of Alabama, who said the American government should first have investigated the truth of the "hit-and-run" charge and declared "it was probably true."

EMPLOYES GIVE $25,000 RELIEF

A fund of $25,000 for distribution among needy families in the East Pittsburgh district, has been raised by an emergency aid committee composed of employes of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. It is estimated that this fund will cover relief work for a period of several months.

Already more than 200 families have been assisted, officers reported. The relief takes the form of grocery orders, light, heat, coal and medical attention.

The campaign to raise funds for the work of this committee is in the form of contributions by different employe organizations and by the company. The works executive council, the Veteran Employees' Association, Foremen's Association, Clerks' Association, Accounts' Association, Manufacturing Operations Association, Athletic Association, Wemco Club, Shop Committee, Picnic Committee and others have arranged for entertainments or card parties or have made donations.

Wilbur Faces Quiz On Kelley Dismissal

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—Secretary of the Interior Wilbur and Solicitor Edward C. Finney, of the interior department, were to appear before the Senate Public Lands Committee today at the opening of hearings on the question of whether charges of Ralph Kelley, of maladministration of the oil shale public lands, should be investigated. Kelley, formerly occupying a high position in the field for the interior department, was dismissed by Wilbur when he sought to get his resignation accepted after making the charges. Because of illness Kelley will not appear today.

Police Investigate 'Returning Worker'

Lysle Craig, 32, of 572 Orchard avenue, Bellevue, arrested early today at Perrysville avenue and East street, was held over for investigation by Magistrate Ray Schneider in North Side Police Court today. Police said they were not satisfied with Craig's statement that he was returning from work, and that he answered the description of a prowler.

Jobless to Register In New Kensington

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Jan. 31.—Burgess Daniel Burns has called on all residents working less than two days a week to register Monday morning at City Hall. Adjt. Victor Bryant said last night the Salvation Army is caring for 190 families. Scores are being helped by other relief associations.

PAIR SOUGHT IN EAST END HOLDUPS

Two Gas Stations, 2 Stores Robbed Within Hour by Bandits Traveling in Auto

A bandit pair who held up two gasoline stations and two confectionery stores in the East End within an hour last night were being sought by police today.

For the ninth time within as many months, the service station of the Standard Oil Company, Hamilton avenue and Putnam streets, was held up. Two armed thugs who entered the place escaped with $15 after holding L. W. Schwer, the attendant, at bay.

The same bandits, police believed, visited the station of the Atlantic Refining Company at Braddock avenue and Finance street, and ordered Paul Sheets, of 6933 Churchland street, the attendant, to open a safe, from which they stole $40.37.

The thugs, traveling in an automobile, next visited the confectionery store of Walter Bruce, at Hamilton and Lang avenues. They rifled the cash register of $20.

Their activities climaxed with the holdup of the confectionery store of Mrs. Margaret Rosswog, at 1201 North Murtland avenue. The thugs stole $3 from the cash register after menacing Mrs. Rosswog and a customer, M. D. Smith, a city fireman, of 1206 North Murtland avenue, with revolvers.

City detectives today arrested two suspects in connection with the holdup of the Central News Agency, 409 Strawberry way, Thursday morning, in which $506 was stolen by two robbers. The suspects, taken to Central Police Station, said they were Joseph Schultz 21, of 116 Washington street, and Joseph India, 21 of 1202 Epiphany street. They were arrested by Detectives Thomas Flavin and Thomas Delehanty.

Mrs. Victoria Meyer, 40, of 221 Lowell street, was robbed of her purse containing $9 by a thug who snatched the bag while she was walking in Lowell street, near Auburn street, last night.

GERMAN WAR ACE KILLED

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—The coterie of aerial daredevils whose spectacular exploits in the World War gained them undying fame was reduced by one today with the death of Capt. Gunther Plueschow, Germany's outstanding ace of the air, who crashed in the Southern Andes. His mechanic, Ernst Dreblow, was killed with him.

According to reports received here, the crackup occurred Wednesday at Lake Rica, near Lake Argentina, in the remote southern end of the republic. The war hero and his mechanic were engaged on a map-making and exploration flight.

Meager information indicated that they died as they had lived—in the spectacular manner of that group whose members faced death with a steady eye. Their airplane collapsed at a height of 2,000 feet, the reports stated and both immediately took to parachutes. The latter failed to open, however, and the captain and his mechanic fell to their death on the shores of the lake.

Holdup Man Escapes With $40 From Store

An armed Negro held up Nicholas Paharish, manager of a P. H. Butler store, 47 Logan street, today and fled with $40 from the cash register after threatening to shoot if Paharish made outcry. The Negro answers the description, detectives said, of a gunman who held up two other chain stores this week, one in the Hill district, and the other in Magee street.

MARTINS FERRY, O., Jan. 31.—Milk prices in all Ohio and West Virginia cities between Steubenville and Moundsville, including Wheeling, will be reduced one cent to 11 cents a quart, beginning Sunday.

Cash and Cigarets Taken from Barbecue

Thieves obtained $7.44 cash and cigarets valued at $1.25 from the barbecue stand of Samuel Krieling, 27 Saw Mill Run boulevard, last night, after entering through a window, he notified police today.

Coolidge Urges That U. S. Dispose of Muscle Shoals

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 31.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The management of Muscle Shoals demonstrates the utter hopelessness of having any considerable business enterprise conducted by the Congress. Development of this plant was commenced under wartime pressure to furnish power to make nitrates for explosives and fertilizers. More recent discoveries and processes render it if not obsolete at least unnecessary for that purpose. Other domestic sources of supply make it a superfluity.

Calvin Coolidge

Like other war property this plant should have been liquidated years ago. But in spite of committee, commission and executive recommendation, politics has always intervened. Rivalry among power, industrial and agricultural interests has prevented any decisive action. Nearly all concerns apparently have wanted to get some special advantage out of the government. That will always be the case with any business with which the government is involved or any property the government owns. Meantime many useful projects on the Tennessee River are held in abeyance.

For the United States to go into the electrical business would be a gross misuse of its powers and involve it in all kinds of political abuses. The thing to do with Muscle Shoals is to dispose of it to private interests with suitable restrictions.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Boy Falls on Track, Loses Hand; Lauds Pal as Hero

Giving his boon companion, Jimmy Leake, 12, of Greenock, credit for having saved his life when he fell beneath a moving Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad train at Greenock, Lawrence Steinmeyer, 10, today was recovering in the McKeesport Hospital where his right hand was amputated.

Steinmeyer slipped and fell on the track while he and Leake were playing tag. Acting quickly, Jimmy pulled Lawrence from the track a few seconds after wheels had passed over the fallen boy's right hand. The older boy carried his pal on his back a quarter of a mile to the office of a physician, who sent him to the hospital. Discussing the accident, Lawrence said:

"Jimmy is a great boy. I guess I'll never be able to repay him for what he did for me. I'd like to write him all about it, but I'll have to learn to write all over again."

FIRES TRYING TO SAVE MOTHER

Woman Hit Accidentally as Carrick Boy Tries to Stop Father's Attack on Wife

Wounded by their son, who fired twice in an attempt to save his mother from his father's alleged abuse, Harvey Aufderheide, 38, and his wife, Elizabeth, 37, of 64 Maytide street, Carrick, were in South Side Hospital today. The son, Edward, 18, was being held by police.

The father, shot in the right arm and hip, asked police to release the son. He was quoted as saying:

The condition of Aufderheide was regarded as serious, while that of his wife, shot in the right hand, was pronounced "fair."

Homicide Detectives Frank Dodson and Thomas Mulvehill said young Aufderheide rushed downstairs with a pistol when his sister, Betty, screamed as she saw her father choking her mother.

The shooting climaxed quarrels of three months, Lieut. David Walsh said the other Aufderheide told him. The shooting resulted from an argument last night, in which Mrs. Aufderheide threatened to leave.

Boy, 16, Kills Father To Defend Mother

SAN JOSE, Cal., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Julius Strobl, 16, held today on a charge of fatally stabbing his stepfather, J. C. Miller, 45, asserted he acted in defense of his mother. The boy's story was confirmed by the widow, who told officers her husband, intoxicated, became enraged last night because she delayed dinner until her son had finished milking.

BLOOD DONOR'S TERM CUT

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Forty-three days of freedom was the reward Joe Dunlap had in prospect today for a pint of blood he donated to a patient in a hospital here.

Dunlap, who recently pleaded guilty to transporting a stolen automobile, voluntered for the blood transfusion yesterday. He was taken under guard to the hospital and then returned to jail.

After the incident was brought to the notice of the Federal Court the order was issued to strike 43 days, the length of time he spent in jail prior to his trial, from his sentence.

The original sentence was for 11 months and 29 days.

Plans Rest and Resumption Of Work; Improvement of Sight Will Be Gradual

BALTIMORE, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Able to recognize friends and distinguish the color of the landscape, after months of darkness, Booth Tarkington today packed his grips to leave Johns Hopkins Hospital, happy in the knowledge his 14-year fight to overcome cataracts has been successful. His improvement, however, will be gradual.

He made plans to go to Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, to rest before returning to Wilmer Institute to be fitted to three pairs of glasses. He will continue his writing. Discussing writing in general, Tarkington remarked today:

"I never did work up much emotion over my own work and when a story was completed I quickly forgot all about it, but I did shed a few tears over 'Sidney Carton,' 'Les Miserables,' and '93'."

STARTING MORE DIFFICULT

The creator of "The Gentleman from Indiana" and "Mirthful Heaven," said:

"I think the young writer of today has a less favorable chance to get his work published than the beginner 10 years ago, because of the greater number of people writing today."

Biography and detective stories are his hobby just now and he keeps his wife and secretary busy reading them to him. He remarked:

"My percentage in solving detective stories is good, but it is hard, as the writer nowadays doesn't give a fellow a chance. They hold out some of the facts and in the last chapter can pin the crime on anyone."

For biography he says little, but admits he doesn't care for Ludwig, saying:

"It's too much Ludwig and too little Napoleon.

"My characters are compo... pictures, seldom an individ... portrait. I have a series of nephews growing up, and from them I made 'Penrod.'"

SEES GOOD IN PAIN

Some time ago while in the midst of his fight to restore his sight, he had this to say of the pain he had suffered:

"Pain is a whip which drives a man to greater effort and achievement. It comes unheralded and strikes like a whip, until the man writhes beneath it. But if one regards it in the proper light it is a means of constructive accomplishment."

BENNETT VISIT INFORMAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Maintaining an "informality" unusual in a distinguished visitor, Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, of Canada, took advantage today of an opportunity to carry out the purposes of his trip to Washington.

The Premier's program for the day was kept entirely open, except for a few conferences with newspapermen, so that he might discuss the affairs of the Canadian legation with officials of the mission.

Although it was indicated officially the Premier's conversations with Secretary Stimson had concerned no matters of international importance, President Hoover said he considered such a visit was in the interests of the common welfare of both nations.

The dinner Mr. Hoover gave last night in honor of Mr. Bennett offered an opportunity for the informal discussions which the President said would take place between the Premier and American officials.

SIX EXECUTED FOR MURDERS

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Three men, partners in crime, went silently to their deaths in the electric chair in Ohio Penitentiary last night in the second triple electrocution in the state's history.

The men were Fred J. Massa, 27; Earl Sites, 27, and Kenneth McCartney, all of Mansfield, O. They paid the death penalty for the fatal shooting of Ralph Wilcox, Galion filling station operator, in an attempted holdup last June 27.

Each walked unfalteringly into the death room and waited for the end without a word.

CANON CITY, Col., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Three bank robbers who shot it out with officers in a two-state flight last March have atoned in death for the murder of a Colorado deputy sheriff.

Gambling for the last few minutes of life, they were hanged in Colorado State Penitentiary here last night.

FEAR OF SALOON SWAYED REPORT

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Frank J. Loesch declared today that the Wickersham Commission, of which he is a member, sought primarily in its recommendations on prohibition, to prevent the return of the saloon. He said:

"Closing of the saloon was the one big accomplishment of the Eighteenth Amendment. That is why those of us on the commission who recommended revision of prohibition also opposed repeal of the amendment. Labor and industry appeared to be unanimously against the open saloon. Its return, in my opinion, would slow down our industrial pace."

Loesch said the report would be an issue in the 1932 election. He added simply that the report would lead to revision of the present situation by centering public attention on it. He said no one attempted to influence the commission.

The Chicago man said he favors the plan advanced by Henry W. Anderson, another Wickersham commissioner, advocating the appointment of an impartisan commission to supervise a private corporation to handle the liquor traffic through issuing of permits. He recommended giving Congress power to legislate on prohibition.

TALK REOPENS LINGLE QUIZ

CHICAGO, Jan. 31, (INS.)—On the strength of a reported address made in Boston by Albert R. Brunker, chairman of the civic safety committee, the special grand jury today was instructed to reopen the inquiry into the gang murder of Alfred J. Lingle, racketeering reporter.

At the suggestion of Chief Justice John P. McGoorty the grand jury called to investigate the asserted alliance between the police and organized crime will probe the politico-gangdom alliance which is believed to have brought Lingle's murder. Lingle was known as the "unofficial police chief of Chicago."

Judge McGoorty indicated that he will instruct the jurors to subpoena Brunker, who was quoted from Boston as having said that the murderers of Lingle "are being covered up and could be found tomorrow if the authorities really wanted them."

Another declaration credited to Brunker, in which he allegedly asserted seven Chicago policemen perpetrated the St. Valentine's Day massacre, in which seven "Bugs" Moran gangsters were slain, will be investigated, Judge McGoorty promised.

A LADY SPEAKING HER MIND WITH PAINTED BANNER

2 FARO VICTIMS TO TELL TODAY

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge and Edward R. Litsinger, prominent Chicagoans, who were the principals in the recent $50,000 faro swindle at Springfield, Ill., are expected to tell their versions of the affair today to two state's attorneys.

State's Attorney Fullenweider, of Sangamon County, where the swindle took place, arrived here for a conference with Prosecutor John A. Swanson, of Cook County. They will decide what criminal action, if any, is to be taken.

Until the swindle Mrs. Blacklidge was collector of internal revenue here. Litsinger, who asserted he loaned her the $50,000, is a member of the Board of Rview and prominent in politics.

New York Near Goal In Red Cross Drive

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—The goal in New York's drive for Red Cross funds to aid drought sufferers was in sight today with $1,149,125 raised. The city's quota is $1,500,000.

DIES IN PLUNGE FROM FIRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—One man was killed, another probably fatally injured and nine had narrow escapes from death early today when fire wrecked the two upper floors of a five-story apartment house in Brooklyn. Two hundred persons were driven to the street in frigid weather in their nightclothes.

The dead man was William Kingsley, 33, who stepped out of the wrong window of his apartment in trying to reach a fire escape and plunged five stories to the street. He died a short while later in a hospital from his injuries.

The nine who narrowly escaped had rushed to the roof when the fire broke out. Their shouts unheard in the street, they remained on top of the house until the roof became red hot beneath their feet, and finally lowered themselves to safety on the roof of a four-story building adjoining.

2 WOMEN DEAD IN FIRE TRAP

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Trapped on the fourth floor of a Charles street rooming house by an early morning fire two women were burned to death today. Two men were dangerously injured when they jumped into the street.

The blaze started on the third floor of the four-story structure, and, driven by a brisk north wind, soon enveloped the whole building.

The two women who lost their lives were identified as Mrs. Arthur Tucker and Miss Alverta Claggett. Arthur Tucker, husband of the dead woman, who leaped from the fourth floor, was believed dying.

The other man, identified only by the name of Long, was suffering from an arm fracture and internal injuries.

Slayer of Sheriff Granted Death Stay

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—The Indiana Supreme Court yesterday granted a stay of execution until November 6 to James Anderson, Kentuckian, who was sentenced to the electric chair last summer for the slaying of Sheriff Herman Lange, of Dearborn County. Anderson had been sentenced to die February 6.

New York Police May Oversee Night Clubs

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—Supervision of New York night clubs and dance halls may be transferred to the police department, Mayor James J. Walker indicated today. He said he was "favorably impressed" with a police plan to supervise the places more closely and reduce crime by keeping the establishments free of undesirables.

LAVAL BACKED BY DEPUTIES

PARIS, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Pierre Laval, son of a country butcher and one of the youngest men ever to reach the head of the French government, was established as premier today by two votes of confidence, which surpassed the hope of even his fondest friends.

His supporters saw in the two majorities—54 on the first vote and 51 on a ballot rejecting an opposition amendment to the original question of confidence—indications that this government, the seventh in the life of the present Parliament, would hold on until a new president is elected in June to succeed M. Doumergue.

Horse, Sold, Returns 17 Miles to Home

BALLYBAY, Irish Free State, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—An Irish David Harum, this is about. He bought a horse at a fair. He couldn't find the owner to pay him. So he turned the animal loose, reckoning on a trek home. The dope was straight. The dealer followed the horse in an automobile 17 miles. Then the seller was so impressed that he refused to go through with the deal.

Accused of Slaying Husband With Belt

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—Charged with choking her husband to death with his belt, Mrs. Elizabeth Tierney, 26, was to be arraigned in court today on a homicide charge. The woman, mother of two children, wrapped the belt around her husband's neck while he was asleep, police charged.

Yale Class of '88 Entertained by Stimsons

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson today were hosts to the State Department head's Yale classmates of '88, who came about 35 strong for a class reunion.

They will gather at Woodley, the Stimson estate here, for a get-together, tonight, and tomorrow will be luncheon guests of the Stimsons.

The secretary had promised his classmates he would play host at a reunion a year ago, but was prevented then because of attendance at the London naval conference.

Saltis, 'Vagrant' Offers Work Film

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—Authorities today had the opportunity of viewing motion pictures which depict Joseph Saltis, one-time beer baron, as a gentleman farmer and proprietor of Saltisville, Wis.

On trial as a public enemy vagrant, Saltis arrived in court here with two rolls of film under his arm. Attorneys promised that the films would show the court that Joe is no vagrant, but spends his time milking cows, pitching hay and plowing the fields.

Thirty-nine policemen were on hand to testify differently.

White Tuxedos New Palm Beach Style

PALM BEACH, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Snow white linen Tuxedos are the thing for men at night social functions. Howard Major, of New York, set the style. Everything is like the Tuxedo ensemble except in color and material and lack of a waistcoat. Instead there is a wide silk belt.

AIRMAN'S FIRST WIFE VICTOR

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Leslie P. Arnold, Army round-the-world flier, still had one too many wives today, due to his failure to obtain a divorce from Mildred Avery Arnold. Arnold was denied a decree from the former war nurse yesterday by the Maricopa County Superior Court.

A pervious decree obtained by Arnold more than a year ago was set aside by the Georgia Supreme Court after the flier had married Priscilla Dean, film actress. The first Mrs. Arnold, after her claim to wifehood had been held above Miss Dean's, said:

"I love him and want him for myself."

Arnold alleged misconduct and infidelity. Mrs. Arnold produced depositions contradicting the charges. Superior Judge J. C. Niles held there were "no grounds for divorce."

First of Piano Lessons In Sunday Sun-Telegraph

Tomorrow, the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will publish the first lesson of the W. Scott Grove course in piano playing. This course is so simple that any child can, by its aid, be started on the way to proficiency on the piano or organ.

The fundamental principles in music must first be mastered.

It makes the learning a pleasure study by making it fascinating.

You know at all times what you are doing, why you are doing it, and what progress you are making.

The author of the plan believes that any person will reach the point where he can play simple popular music, and if he wants to get beyond that, and in all probability he will, Pittsburgh instruction offers the best training.

Be sure to get these lessons from the start. Each lesson will be printed one time only. Remember there are 24 of them. Lesson tomorrow.

The First Methodist Protestant Church, Aiken avenue and Howe street, has completed the installation of theatrical equipment, which includes special lighting features, for use in connection with the Sunday evening services.

The Rev. Dr. J. W. Hawley, pastor, has announced the first presentation in the new series of services, "The Ten Virgins," a religious musical drama, will be presented tomorrow night by the Triangle Club, under the direction of Mrs. Hazel Hamilton.

Following the pageant, Dr. Hawley will speak on "How." He is conducting the evening services through the means of visual education. Dr. Hawley's message will be presented each Sunday night through sermons, pageants, pantomimes, songs, stories, and other visual and auditory methods.

Dr. Hawley is being assisted in the series by Mary Jones Sherrill, dramatic reader; Norman O'Hara, radio tenor; Mrs. W. H. Calvin, J. Alvin Little and Miss Bernice Quartz, musicians.

At the morning service Dr. Hawley will speak on "When Prayer Is Unsatisfactory."

He will speak of the work of the Foreign Missions Board, and will tell of the work being carried on by 4,023 workers in 7,752 enterprises from Alaska to the West Indies.

BOOTHS FIGHT 'ARMY' BILL

LONDON, Jan. 31. — (AP.) — Mrs. Florence Booth, widow of Gen. Bramwell Booth, and Commissioner Catherine Booth, their daughter, were among the signers of a petition against the Salvation Army bill, the second reading of which was postponed in the House of Commons yesterday.

The bill would make the Salvation Army more democratic and take away from the leader much of the autocratic power held by Bramwell Booth. It is based on resolutions passed at a recent conference of commissioners here. All of the measures are advocated by Evangeline Booth, sister of Bramwell and the organization's leader in America.

Postponement of the second reading of the bill come after certain members of Parliament had requested further discussion. It will be brought up later for debate.

Preaching

DR. WILLIAM T. LYTLE

The Rev. Dr. Lytle, Ben Avon United Presbyterian Church pastor, who will speak tomorrow morning on "By Way of Remembrance."

ENDEAVOR DAY EXERCISES ARRANGED

Fiftieth Anniversary of Founding of Movement Observed in Churches

Christian Endeavor Day, marking the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Christian Endeavor movement, and a day of prayer for missions, will be observed by the First Evangelical Church, Center avenue and Graham street, and the Grace Evangelical Church, Hay and Wallace streets, Wilkinsburg, Sunday. A quiet hour service in observance of Christian Endeavor Day will be held tomorrow afternoon by the North Side Branch of the Christian Endeavor Union, Arch and Diamond streets.

The programs of both churches will be in charge of the Christian Endeavor Societies.

At the First Evangelical Church Miss Adelaide Smith will speak on "Youth in the Church" and Walter W. Haller will discuss "Youth in Christian Endeavor." John R. Bicht, president of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Evangelical Church, will preside.

Mrs. Gaius J. Slosser, Japanese missionary and teacher, will speak at the evening services of the Grace Evangelical Church. Following the services, officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

A day of prayer will also be observed at both churches at the morning services. At Grace Evangelical it will mark the meridian of a "Self-Denial" period for members of the Women's Missionary Society. Preceding the services at the First Evangelical Church the Young Ladies' Missionary Circle will conduct a prayer service in conjunction with the Women's Missionary Society.

FATHER HEHIR LEAVES CITY

The Very Rev. Martin A. Hehir, recently named president emeritus of Duquesne University, left Pittsburgh at 9 o'clock this morning for Holy Ghost College at Cornwells Heights, Pa., where he will assume his new duties as head of that institution. MACKEY TO JOIN BLUE LAW FIGHT

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Returning from a week's vacation in Florida, Mayor Harry A. Mackey said today he would demand that the Legislature "give the people a Sabbath law in definite modern terms so that citizens will know exactly what they may do on Sunday."

The Mayor showed especial interest in the bill introduced by Representative M. A. Musmanno, Allegheny County, giving voters opportunity to voice their choice regarding Sunday observance. He said:

"Every chief executive in every town in the state should join in this request. As the so-called blue law now stands, no man knows what to enforce or what to ignore.

"The present law is a serious barrier to helping the unemployed. When an organization desires to give something for charity on Sunday it is prevented because it is pointed out such a step is a violation of the present statute.

"I believe the cause of righteousness would be advanced by a more liberal Sabbath law, and surely no one will criticize the Legislature for giving the people an opportunity to do what they want within limitations of good order."

COLLEGE HEADS ELECT LEADER

Gov. Pinchot, in a brief address, asked closer co-operation between independent colleges and state schools.

Robert K. Root, of Princeton, and George W. McClelland, of the University of Pennsylvania, told the conference their liberal arts schools have dropped the degree of bachelor of science and combined those studies with the bachelor of arts course. Both expressed satisfaction with the results of the new plan.

Police Save Man From Second Wedding

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Wedding bells were to ring today for Frank Stacy, 35, and plans had been completed for the joyful celebration to follow.

But last night Stacy was in a police cell awaiting his return to Beaver, Pa. It appears that in arranging his wedding, Stacy overlooked the fact he had a wife and five children in the Pennsylvania city.

Arrested on a charge of abandonment on his wedding eve, Stacy stoically bade his bride-to-be goodbye and told police he was ready to return to home and Beaver.

EXPLORER JOINS WILKINS TRIP

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Lincoln Ellsworth, American explorer who was co-leader with Roald Amundsen and Gen. Umberto Nobile in their Polar flight in 1926, announced that he had joined Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins' submarine voyage to the North Pole next summer.

He said that he would back the venture with finances, knowledge of the field to be explored and with services. He will accompany the expedition if his affairs can be so arranged, he added.

With the announcement was the statement that the venture would be called the Wilkins-Ellsworth expedition.

AID FOR HOME OWNERS ASKED

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 31.—Addressing a meeting of citizens of Washington County here last night, called for the purpose of discussing taxation, State Treasurer Edward Martin declared the state for years had been increasing expenditures in the schools and aiding townships in the construction of roads. These were worthy efforts, he said, but declared that in his opinion the home owner must receive more serious consideration now, continuing:

"He asks for little, but we must not forget to give him the consideration he deserves, for in the final analysis the prosperity of our nation depends on our home owners."

Judge Howard W. Hughes and H. R. Campbell, secretary of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, were other speakers.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Boys, Girls At Skating Party

Folks certainly are becoming party-minded this mild winter weather. And brides and brides-elect aren't the only favored ones, the members of the very young smart set are entertained as much as their elders. I can tell you of a party for three young folks taking place this very afternoon.

The Oliver L. Smiths of Devon road, are giving a large roller skating party this afternoon at 2 o'clock, in Motor Square Gardens, in honor of their daughter, Marian, and their sons, Jimmie and Oliver, Jr. There are about 250 members of the younger set there.

* * *

One of this month's most feted brides-elect is Mary Robinson Oliver, whose marriage to William Christopher Robinson, Jr., is to take place Monday. Last night the bride-elect was guest of honor at a dinner dance given by the George H. Loves, in the home of Mrs. Love's parents, the Howard Hale McClintics, of Beechwood boulevard. The table was banked with yellow calla lilies, and yellow tapers completed the decorations. The guest of honor chose white chiffon, beaded with crystal for her gown.

Guest at Dinner

And this evening there will be a buffet supper in Mary's honor, being given by Mary Rhodes and her brother, Thomas E. Rhodes, in the home of their parents, the James Dickinson Rhodeses, of Thorn street, Sewickley. Later in the evening there will be a dinner dance in the Allegheny Country Club, given by the ushers, John S. Laughlin, William D. George, Charles Lord Bell, William Lloyd Standish III, Henry Oliver, John H. Ricketson III, James O. Flower, Frank Faber Brooks, Jr., and James Verner Scaife, Jr.

The Harry F. Youngs, of Edgerton avenue, Wilkinsburg, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mildred Graham Young, and T. Ruud Larsen, nephew of the Edwin Ruuds, of South Graham street, which took place yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Wilkinsburg. The Rev. William Porkess officiated. After their return from a southern motor trip, the Larsens will be at home in Wellesley avenue, East End.

The marriage of Mrs. Harriet T. Ovenshire, of Penn Yan, N. Y., and William C. Young, of the North Side, took place in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Sprague, of Federal street, on Thursday evening, with the Rev. Dr. Alvin J. Orr officiating.

Evening Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. Young left for Florida and will make their home in Osgood street, North Side, upon their return.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. N. Edward Nelson, of North Second street, Duquesne, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Nelson, to Dr. J. Harry Lenhart, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Murray Lenhart, of Duquesne, which took place in the Lenhart home at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning. The Rev. Harry Lee Crawford, of the First Presbyterian Church, officiated.

Announce Marriage

There was a wedding breakfast for the families, after which Dr. and Mrs. Lenhart left for a motor trip to Florida. They will make their home in North Second street upon their return.

Miss Margaret B. White, of Union avenue, Ingram, entertained with a bridge party in her home Thursday evening, in honor of Miss Mary B. Speer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Speer, of Ingram, whose marriage to Clarence M. Towers, of Ashtabula, O., will take place on February 28. The color scheme was in orchid and green, with roses and sweetpeas decorating the tables.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Max Broder, of Ohio avenue, Glassport, will be at home tomorrow evening from 9 to 11 o'clock in honor of their daughter, Miss Mayme Broder, and Meyer Jacobs, of McKeesport, whose marriage will take place early tomorrow.

Women Throng to Hear Doctors Debate on Birth Control

More than 400 women crowded into the Congress of Clubs auditorium (which has a seating capacity of 300) yesterday afternoon to hear the debate on birth control featuring the afternoon session of the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs. But before the debate and on proposal of Mrs. O. H. Graf, president of the Carrick Mother's Club, the federation indorsed Mrs. John M. Philips for the presidency of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women. Mrs. Richard B. Perry, former president of the county federation, was indorsed as district president of the state federation.

The debate, on which no decision was taken, was between Dr. Rosewell H. Johnson, for the affirmative, and Dr. Theodore Diller, upholding the negative.

Dr. Johnson made out a clear-cut, dignified case for his side. He stated that the purpose of birth control is to regulate the size of the population according to the economic state and in the interest of the welfare of the people. He discussed the three paths open to married couples—the rabbit policy, that of having children as rapidly as possible; the married monk policy—a sexless marriage, and the third, which is possible through birth control, a regulated life with children properly spaced as is best for them and the mother and society in general.

Dr. Diller declared every woman fools herself when she thinks she has used reasoning in accepting birth control theories. He insisted that birth control runs counter to biology. He argued that there was no more right in birth control than there would be in killing off old people or mental deficients, and that the program as outlined by birth control advocates is utterly impossible. He insisted that marriage is for one purpose only—procreation.

He discussed neither spacing nor contraception, which proponents of birth control stress, devoting a great part of his time to remarks against infanticide, which, the opposition points out, does not enter into the case. Dr. Diller was largely criticized after the debate for some of his remarks, which the women said were neither apropos nor in good taste.

In rebuttal Dr. Johnson quoted from the recent papal encyclical: "One of the purposes of marriage is the cultivating of mutual love." If birth control is a biologic insult, then so also is swimming, cutting the hair and nails, he stated. The real insult, he declared, is the large family that ruins the mother's health and makes the children dependent on the community.

At the morning session District Attorney Andrew T. Park told how Criminal Court operates, and there were reports from committees and officers. The Outlook Alliance Choral sang.

Mrs. E. A. Partridge and Miss Phyllis Partridge, mother and sister of Mrs. C. C. Kochenderfer, president of the Mt. Lebanon Woman's Club, will leave shortly for their home in New Zealand after having made an extended visit here. On Tuesday the two visitors will be guests of honor at a reception which the directors of the club will give in Mrs. I. G. Amsler's home, Parkway drive.

To Honor Visitors

The senior section of the literary department of the Woman's Club will meet Friday in Mrs. C. L. Hickling's home, Hazel drive, to continue the study of Chamberlain's "Soviet Russia" and to hear Miss Thamara E. Goldenhoff relate her girlhood experiences in Russia.

The proceeds of the movie and vaudeville show to be given Sunday evening, February 22, by the Montefiore Aid Society will be used for the needy of the city.

The affair, at which Dick Powell is to be master of ceremonies, will be given in the Schenley Theater under the chairmanship of Miss Ruth Perlman, with Mrs. Max Ruttenberg as vice chairman.

* * *

Mrs. W. C. Graham is president of the Wilkinsburg Woman's Club, which will have its annual reciprocity evening Monday in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel. All the other federated clubs in the town have been invited to hear the program, consisting of a playlet and music.

Mrs. Graham

The February meeting of the drama department on Tuesday, the tenth, in Mrs. W. E. Brinker's home, will be in charge of Mrs. Brinker's group. Mary Clancy will read Barrie's "A Kiss for Cinderella" and a number of the members will review current plays.

* * *

Members of Pennsylvania Chapter, No. 204, Order of the Eastern Star, will be guests of Mrs. Lillian Forsythe at a card party in her home, in Chalfant street, next Saturday evening.

* * *

Dr. Andre Avinoff will have "Russian Art Past and Present" for his topic when he addresses the Woman's Club of Carnegie Institute of Technology Wednesday afternoon in the Faculty Club room.

Carnegie Tech Club

Malcolm McDonald addressed the Turtle Creek Woman's Club last night, and Mrs. L. E. Kimmerling, accompanied by William A. Reger, furnished the music. Hostesses were Mrs. W. F. Plotner, Mrs. W. W. Lantz, Mrs. J. L. Kemerer and Mrs. E. H. Anderson.

* * *

An original program was carried out yesterday by the Carnegie Woman's Club under the title of "What? Where? When? and Why? Day." Why a firefly lights her light, how the beach gets its sand, what the 13-month calendar is, what cork is, where pearls come from and why are dog-days so called were some of the 14 three-minute papers which made up the program by the various members.

Mrs. Rolla Lyons was hostess and Mrs. L. B. Worley leader for the meeting, which was held in the Y. W. C. A.

* * *

A valentine bridge and musicale will be given Thursday at the Woman's City Club by the Pittsburgh Business and Professional Women's Club. The program will be presented by Blanche Hilliard Robie, soprano; Marian Swan, pianist; Mrs. Charles T. Topping, violinist; Charles W. Hall, tenor, and Eleanor Moren, accompanist. Marie Maloney is chairman of the affair and is taking reservations.

Bridge Musicale

* * *

The annual birthday dinner of the Dicken Fellowship Monday at the Fort Pitt Hotel will be a revival of Mrs. Leo Hunter's fancy dress ball and for the program there will be old-fashioned dances, recitations and music under the direction of Miss Edith Bane.

* * *

Miss Miriam Schonfield will supervise the drama day program for the Woman's Club of Pittsburgh Tuesday afternoon in the Congress clubhouse. A group of students from the Pittsburgh College for Women will present "The Sponge," by Alice C. D. Riley, the cast including Ann Bateman, Sara Miller, LaVerda Dent, Evelyn Hays and Adelaide Lasner. Roy Magram, a student of the University of Pittsburgh, will give piano selections.

Drama Meeting

* * *

Mrs. D. B. Woods will be hostess to the Edgewood League of Women Voters on Monday afternoon at her home in Garland avenue. Book reviews dealing with the Republican and Democratic parties will be given by Mrs. F. W. Horst and Mrs. W. L. Everett.

The Twentieth Ward League will hold its monthly meeting on Monday evening in the Langley High School. Mrs. R. B. Stone and Mrs. H. K. Griffin, delegates to the Cause and Cure of War Conference, will cover its different phases. A book review will be given by Mrs. M. D. Beatty.

A tour of the Naturalization Court will be made by the Thirty-second Ward League on Wednesday morning, with Mrs. Elizabeth B. Motz in charge.

Simeon E. Leland, of the University of Chicago, will address the Friday Morning Club this week, taking the place of Silas Hardy Strawn, who was scheduled for this date. Mr. Leland was a member of Mr. Strawn's citizens' committee, which had to do with the refinancing of Chicago.

SCALLOPS FEATURED ON SPRING CLOTHES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Scallops are prominent on the sartorial menu this season. One finds this form of embellishment on coats, wraps and dresses, not to speak of handbags, hats and gloves. It certainly is one of the best forms of trimming and gives interest to a garment without too much ostentation. Good frocks are well cut, not too severely tailored, yet without any unnecessary trifles or details. Fussiness must be avoided. When scalloped details are used, it is rare to find any other trimming on the frock, so effective is this type of ornamentation. It will be much seen on afternoon frocks and the coat-dresses that will be to the fore in the spring clothes lineup, judging by the scalloped models displayed prominently in nearly every important collection.

* * *

CREPE DE CHINE continues to hold its own. It has had a most successful revival and is used for both day and evening models. It is the medium employed for the very smart Jenny frock, an afternoon model, shown. This neat black frock is cleverly arranged with scalloped piecings on the blouse and skirt. In the latter instance the scallops define the edges of the godets, which, at the center front, give a soft, circular flare. A small bow of two colors, one loop white, the other bright green, trims the front of the corsage.

Oldest Retired Army Officer Nearing 98

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—The War Department figured out today that the honor of being the oldest officer on the retired list of the Army now rests with Maj. John Wesley Bean, of Attleboro, Mass., now nearing his ninety-eighth birthday. The new calculation was brought about by the death last week in New York of Maj. John V. Lauderdale. The next oldest soldier now on the list is Capt. William Nelson, of Roan Mountain, Tenn.

PIANO LESSONS

Starting Sunday, February 1st, the Sun-Telegraph will publish the first lesson of the W. Scott Grove Course in Piano Playing. This course is so simple that any child can, by its aid, be started on the way to proficiency on the piano or organ. The fundamental principles in music must first be mastered . . . that is essential. The Music Simplifier Course in Piano Playing teaches the fundamental principles in the easiest and simplest manner possible. It makes the learning a pleasure study by making it fascinating. You know at all times what you are doing, why you are doing it, and what progress you are making.

The author of the plan believes that any person will reach the point where he can play simple popular music, and if he wants to get beyond that, and in all probability he will, Pittsburgh instruction offers the best possible training.

Be Sure to get these lessons from the start. Each lesson will be printed one time only. Remember there are 24 of them. Lesson 1 Sunday, Feb. 1st.

FEDERAL JURY SESSION ENDS

The special session of the federal grand jury ended yesterday. During the five days it was in session 159 indictments, naming 205 defendants, were handed down. Approximately 75 per cent of the investigations were actions under the national prohibition law, which were personally presented before the jury by United States Attorney Louis E. Graham.

Among the last batch of indictments were four charging the Fraternal Order of Eagles at Johnstown, Erie, Monessen and California with having sold and possessed contraband liquor and maintaining common nuisances.

The rumors that Fred Stratman, Daniel "Harp" McLaughlin and Thomas C. Johnson, Jr., would be brought from the Atlanta Penitentiary to tell the grand jury of ramifications of illegal liquor traffic in the North Side, which would involve police and politicians, failed to materialize, as did the same rumors before the November session of court.

SEEK TO RETAIN HORSE BAN

A continuance of the ban on horse-drawn vehicles from major trunk boulevards after a 60-day trial regulation was recommended by the Better Traffic Committee, according to a letter from City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre to Public Safety Director James M. Clark yesterday. The committee recommends the passage of an ordinance by City Council to replace the 60-day trial.

The ban, which resulted from a public meeting at which horse-drawn vehicle operators and members of the Better Traffic Committee attended, applies on Bigelow boulevard, from Seventh avenue to Bloomfield bridge; Boulevard of the Allies, from Grant street to Craft avenue; Craig street, from Bigelow to Baum boulevards, and Baum boulevard, from Craig street to South Highland avenue.

WOMAN SEEKS WRIT FOR SON

Hearing was to be held in Common Pleas Court today on the habeas corpus application of Mrs. Jeanette Farley, nee McFeeley, of 92 Jay street, Albany, N. Y., for possession of her son, William Arlen McFeeley, aged 2 years 7 months, now in the possession of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Benning, 1516 Ridge avenue, North Braddock.

The mother says she married Joseph Farley September 2. She says she placed her child in the custody of the Bennings January 15, 1930 because at that time she was unable to provide a proper home for him. Now she is in position to reclaim him and says her husband is willing for her to do so.

The King and Queen of Hearts, Apaches in their form-fitting attire, Pirates and others fancifully costumed danced with a peppermint candy stick, the Eve of the evening, shoe and comic ads at the Artists' and Adsters' annual Frikse Frolic in the William Penn Hotel last night.

More than 700 guests were present and the costuming was both more general and more colorful than in former years. Prizes were won by Miss Betty Bell, the ball chairman; Miss Edith Mansmann, M. Barton, Miss Velma Caputo, Miss Mary Hulsman, Miss Helen Ryman, president of the Woman's Ad Club, who was "Eve"; Mr. and Mrs. Murray Fahnestock, Miss Mildred Hirsh, William Glass, H. G. Westerman and C. A. Gilson.

The decorations carried out the "Garden of the Golden Apple" idea. Quaintly made trees bearing the golden fruit stood among the tables, smilax and apples draped the balcony rail and a huge golden apple was the stage from which the first of the evening's professional performers made her entrance and tossed hundreds of golden balls to the guests.

Adding to the general picturesqueness of the event was Martha Hunt Morris' table of 36 covers, where each chair was draped with an original costume designed by the hostess and each place was marked with a high hat with the unemployed apple sellers' legend attached.

TAYLOR URGES HUMANIZING OF TRADE

Opportunities Can Be Made Greater, Burdens Lighter, Steel Executive Declares

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation, is a civilized man who seeks to humanize business.

This executive sees the country stunned by progress in mechanical production, which has not yet been adequately directed. He urges that machines be used for the service of men, and believes that beyond the present lull there is a new period of quickened prosperity for the average man.

Mr. Rukeyser.

As a practical business man of the first order, he urges his fellow executives to make business plans dovetail with social reform. In his latest expression, Mr. Taylor said:

"We who are interested in these problems, by co-operation and exchange of thought and idea and plan, can bring about such an ordered system that the individual will find the burdens growing lighter, opportunities becoming greater, and the enjoyment of life by him and his family and those about him expanding and improving in every direction.

"If there be any objective in this existence of ours worthy of the time and effort spent by us who are passing through it, it must be to raise mankind in general—not the particular few, but the entire race—to higher levels of understanding and co-operation, of enjoyment and wellbeing. The crusaders in this cause, those who seek through thoughtful and orderly channels to contribute to the well-being of the whole, will have attained life's greatest reward, because it can be accomplished through no other way than service, and this sort of service is worthy of the talent and abilities of the greatest minds of the age."

As a temporary experiment during depression, the Steel Corporation has been staggering employment among its workers—giving part time employment to the many instead of full time employment to a much smaller number. This make-shift policy at least reflected a sense of responsibility on the part of the employer toward its men who were able and willing to work.

FREEPORT GETS VINTON RIGHTS

Freeport Texas Company has secured the sulphur rights to a property known as the Vinton dome, which has a cap-rock area of approximately 750 acres, located at Vinton, Calcasieu Parish, Louisana, 12 miles southwest of the Union Sulphur Company's original sulphur dome at Sulphur, La., where the Frasch process for mining sulphur was developed.

The Vinton dome is considered by geologists to be one of the most promising areas for potential sulphur deposits, and has been sought after for years by the leading sulphur interests, but heretofore has been unavailable because closely held by an estate. It is favorably located for sulphur operations, three miles from the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad and five miles from the intercoastal canal leading from Orange, Tex., to the Gulf of Mexico. High tension electric and natural gas lines pass close by. Equipment is being moved to the properties and exploration drilling will be started in two weeks.

CALIFORNIA OIL STOCKS DROP

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—The United States Bureau of Mines reports 48 refineries in California in December, operating at 60.8 per cent of capacity, ran to stills an average of 536,049 barrels of crude oil daily. Production of gasoline during December totaled 6,528,480 barrels, or a decrease of 253,111 barrels from November. Gasoline cracking increased to 1,500,805 barrels from 1,208,275 in November.

Production of heavy crude and fuel oil totaled 7,344,999 barrels, an increase of 205,156 barrels, while stocks of these oils at the end of December were 103,194,478 barrels, an increase during the month of 191,143 barrels. Stocks of refinable crude totaled 38,087,862 barrels, a decrease of 509,715 barrels, and total shipments were 6,082,985 barrels, compared to 6,541,910 in November.

Radio Keith Takes Over Pathe Assets

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Radio Keith Orpheum Corporation has taken title to the assets of the Pathe Company, purchased in accordance with the contract made between the two companies and ratified by the Pathe stockholders early this month, it was stated in an announcement by Hiram S. Brown, president of RKO.

Two distinct producing and distributing organizations will be maintained, the announcement said, a separate company continuing the operations of the present Pathe studio and Pathe branch offices in this country and abroad.

St. Paul Loadings Drop in January

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—During the first 28 days in January the St. Paul Railroad handled 115,195 revenue cars, against 134,184 in the same period of 1930.

HOW LONG TO GET BACK TO NORMAL?

—By JOHN H. VAN DEVENTER—

Since 1880, we have had six major declines in business, not counting the present depression. Measured by the per cent of drop from peak to valley, three of them have been more severe than the present one and three of them less. This is on the assumption that we have now reached our low point, or have possibly passed it by a few weeks, a belief that is shared by many business authorities.

The drop in business activity, from the 1929 peak to the present has been about 31½ per cent. The three depressions of greater decline, of 1882, 1893 and 1907, averaged a drop of close to 35 per cent, over an average period of 17 months. The recovery period, or time required to get back to normal after the corner was turned, averaged 15 months.

The three depressions of lesser severity, of 1895, 1903 and 1913 averaged a drop of 25½ per cent from peak to valley of business activity. The periods of decline averaged 13 months and recovery back to normal averaged 12 months.

On the basis of past performance, it should require between 12 and 15 months to bring business activity back to a normal basis. This period may be shortened because of the beginning of recovery coinciding with the normal seasonal pick-up usually displayed in the first quarter of the year. An additional push of this sort is helping in getting up speed.

American business may be compared to a motor car with plenty of gas in the tank, but with the self-starter battery run down. It is up to business men and manufacturers, big and little, as well as consumers, to add their push to that of normal seasonal pick-up during the next three months in order to get the car moving. Once the car of business is under way it will recharge its own battery and we can all jump in and ride again.

Real Estate

Inauguration of two new national business consultation services has been announced by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The two services are a consultation service on rental apartment buildings and an advisory service for distressed properties and for properties of all types upon which expert property management advice is needed in order to bring existing buildings into successful competition with neighboring structures. Both services are to be conducted through the property management division of the association.

E. F. Engelhard, Jr., sales manager of the North Hills Improvement Company, reports that a gain in building activity is shown this month in the North Hills estates. According to Engelhard, four more lots in the development were sold during this month than in January, 1930. There are three new houses under construction and bids are being taken on four more. Two of these four homes will be started next month.

A property, 30x100 feet in Adelphia street, Tenth Ward, has been deeded by Robert Eichner to Robert Caughey for $2,000.

W. F. Trimble, Jr., of W. F. Trimble & Sons, contractors, has been elected president of the board of directors of the Pittsburgh Builders' Exchange. This marks the third time Trimble was selected for that office.

Twelfth Ward—C. H. and F. C. Brinker, brick office, 6545 Hamilton avenue, $6,500.

BANK DEBITS DECLINE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Weekly business indicators available to the Department of Commerce for the week ending January 24, show bank debits declined slightly from the week previous, and were under the corresponding period in 1930. Total loans and discounts of Federal Reserve member banks declined fractionally from the week previous and were also under the figures for the same week last year. Interest rates for time money were considerably lower than a week ago, while call rates showed no change. Both rates were materially lower than a year ago. Prices of representative stocks increased over the average prices of the week previous, but were materially under the same week in 1930. Bond prices increased fractionally during the week, and were above the average price for the corresponding week last year. The ratio of total Federal Reserves to deposit and Federal Reserve note liabilities combined rose during the week and was above the same week in 1930.

Wholesale prices, as measured by the composite index, showed a fractional decline from the preceding week. The prices of both agricultural and non-agricultural products declined, and were under the quotations of the same week in 1930. The price of wheat at Kansas City rose slightly from the preceding week, as did cotton middling at New York. The iron and steel composite price index remained at the same level as for the week previous.

MINIMUM FIRE HAZARD AT SCHOOL

Building Equipped With Marshall Elevators; Firm Adds New Unit

Connelly Trade School is one of Pittsburgh's institutions for the practical training of boys in all the trades. There are completely equipped machine shops, painting department, sheet metal shop, electric power and equipment shops, cabinet shops, automobile shops, foundry, pattern shop, radio shop and many other departments, all under competent instructors.

Over 1,000 apprentice placements have been made through Pittsburgh's Co-operative Apprentice program, during the first five years the course has been in operation. The school, which was formerly located on the North Side, was moved to the new building in the fall of 1930.

SAFETY FEATURES

One of the outstanding features of the Connelly Trade School is the Marshall electric elevator. Every precaution has been taken to make the elevator hatchway absolutely fireproof. All of the 10 entrance doors are fireproofed, thus reducing the fire hazard to the minimum.

The Marshall elevator is equipped with all of the latest safety features for the operation of this elevator. The Marshall company also furnished the electric equipment department of the trade school with a special demonstrating miniature elevator, which can be operated either as an automatic push-button elevator or car-switch control. The trade school is equipped with a Marshall dynamic lowering hoist for use in demonstrating the principles of crane control similar to those used in the large steel plants of the Pittsburgh districts. In addition to the large elevator business of the Marshall concern, they have added a fire-door division.

The Marshall Brothers Company offices and factory are located at Twenty-first and Mary streets, South Side.

PHONE POLICY DISCUSSED

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—There is not only no incentive, but it would be contrary to sound policy for the management to earn speculative or large profits for distribution as "melons" or extra dividends, according to Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, in an interview with B. C. Forbes in Forbes Magazine. On the other hand payments to stockholders limited to reasonable regular dividends with their right, as the business requires new money from time to time, to make further investments on favorable terms, are to the interest both of the telephone users and of the stockholders. He said:

"Earnings must be sufficient to assure the best posible telephone service at all times and to assure the continued financial integrity of the business. Earnings that are less than adequate must result in telephone service that is something less than the best possible. Earnings in excess of these requirements must either be spent for the enlargement and improvement of the service furnished or the rates charged for the service must be reduced. This is fundamental in the policy of management."

Michigan Central Seeks O.K. on Bonds

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Michigan Central Railroad has asked Interstate Commerce Commission authority to issue $4,000,000 4½ per cent Series "C" improvement mortgage bonds, dated January 1, 1929, and maturing January 1, 1979. New York Central asked authority to guarantee the bonds although no arrangements have yet been made for their sale. The bonds will be redeemable on any interest date before July 1, 1974, at 105 and thereafter at par.

Chicago Reserve Rate Unchanged

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Following a meeting of Chicago Federal Reserve Bank directors, no announcement was made regarding the re-discount rate, which is 3 per cent.

STEEL TREND DISAPPOINTS RECENTLY

January's Marked Increase Fails to Overcome Very Poor December Showing

By B. E. V. LUTY.

There has been disappointment over the course of affairs in the steel market in the last couple weeks or more, not because steel business has not improved and not because improvement, in percentage, has not been of the usual seasonal amount, but because December was so very poor that a large improvement was needed to represent substantial progress towards a fair volume. In ordinary times when there is a seasonal swing and no important trend in general business January may show about 10 per cent heavier production than December, scarcely more, whereas the official report for the month now ending will probably show well over 10 per cent increase and may easily show over 15 per cent. Such increases however represent additional engagement of only a few per cent of total capcity.

Steel contributes favorable testimony to the question whether the general business recession ended in December. Its showing was that recession was in progress into December, for steel production decreased in September and October instead of having the usual seasonal increase, and then decreased in November and December by much more than the usual seasonal amount. Now steel shows, if anything, more than usual seasonal gain, so that its particular testimony is that recession was completed before January 1.

OUTLOOK CLOUDED

Whether steel will shortly furnish testimony that there is an actual upturn in general business is a question. In the last week or two there has been little or no increase in the volume of steel buying. From this one should not conclude that seasonal improvement is halting, for history shows it to be the regular or usual thing for January and March to bring more increase in steel production than February. In 1926, February even ran a trifle below the January rate; yet the year was a good and steady one all around.

The theory is still held that this year will be one of more or less continuous improvement in steel demand, meaning that there may be no decrease for the summer or that if there is one it will be less marked than usual. However, it can hardly be other than a long road to even a fair engagement of productive capacity, for December steel production was only about 35 per cent of prospective capacity. To illustrate, a 5 per cent increase in tonnage month by month would require 14 months to bring about a 70 per cent producing rate.

PRICES HOLDING

The finished steel price structure is holding very well. It is technically true that the market is undergoing little test by there being tempting inquiries for good sized tonnages but there is little disposition on the part of buyers to seek concessions and sellers seem to be firm in their conviction that what they need to do, particularly in view of light operation and high costs, is to get prices up. The time for such attempts, if made, would be about a month hence, on the eve of second quarter contracting. By recognized trade practice sellers are committed to a policy of taking care of customers' needs during this quarter at prices lately ruling.

'Frisco Reduced Fare Is Effective

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—By failing to act on protests instituted against the action, the Interstate Commerce Commission has allowed the St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad system to put in effect tonight coach fares over its entire system for passengers at the rate of two cents a mile.

The passenger rate reduction proposed by the 'Frisco system was one of the first important steps taken by a major carrier to counter particularly motor bus competition. Its announcement resulted in a serious difference of opinion among carrier executives.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

Forbes

Lots of Money Is Waiting To Go Into Stock

By B. C. FORBES

IS THERE an abundance of money in most parts of this country available for investment? Read this wire received by this column from a well-known Nebraska utility company:

Mr. Forbes

"Our preferred stock campaign has smashed all records. Ten thousand 6 per cent shares were put on sale, at 1p1, at 8:30 in the morning, and by 5 o'clock in the afternoon all the stock was sold, mostly by employes of the company. The issue has been greatly oversubscribed.

"Four years ago a similar stock-selling campaign lasted 12 days. Fifteen months ago a like sale of stock took three and a half days, contrasted with less than one day this time."

THE FINANCIAL world is also beginning to find out that a lot of people have money which they mean to invest. Offerings of new bonds were well received until, rather suddenly, the financial world was thrown into a state of nervousness by fears that the movement at Washington to pay war veterans cash bonuses aggregating several billions of dollars might succeed. The investment world agrees with Secretary Mellon that, were Congress to insist upon the distribution of a gigantic amount of cash, all government and other gilt-edged bonds would be hurt in price. Hence the fall in bond quotations.

Had this new disturbing episode not occurred, the prospect is that investment in both stocks and bonds would have continued on a scale sufficient to send prices higher. The expectation is that the cash bonus talk will end in talk and that the absorption of investments will be resumed on a new scale.

Among my friends are some who are still holding aloof in the hope of being able to purchase stocks at lower prices than any yet recorded. Others have lately concluded that little risk is entailed in buying at prevailing quotations. Even the most bearish are now beginning to lose cocksure confidence that the worst is yet to come. In banking circles sentiment has undergone very distinct improvement.

POLITICIANS and politics are so prominent on newspaper front pages these days that the following observation by the veteran sage of Arkansas, Ed Howe, is timely:

"I had not heard of Dr. Herbert Henry Dow until I saw a reference to his death, in connection with an announcement of a son succeeding him as president of the Dow Chemical Company, of Midland, Mich.

"Still, Dr. Dow was a very noted, useful and worthy man. Thirty-three years ago he went to Dow, Mich., as the proverbial poor boy. When he died, he had built up a plant stretching over 250 acres, containing 310 buildings, and 18 miles of standard gauge railway tracks. Every day it uses 2,000 tons of coal, and gives employment to 2,500 people. He had been accorded many distinctions; Henry Ford said of him: 'He is a most distinguished and successful representative of the American chemist, who is also an executive, an engineer and a manufacturer.'

"Under his influence Dow, Mich., became almost a model town, and Dr. Dow was almost worshipped by its citizens. He loved to remain at home pretty steadily, and attend to his work, as did the good son who has succeeded him. Both had beautiful homes, and were excellent family men, as well as exceptionally useful citizens. Still I had never heard of them, although I am bored to distraction by hearing of thonsands of others who only play golf, football, sing, act or write a little, or make a business of politics.

"Thousands of other notable American men of business are equally unknown to the masses, except that we refer to them contemptuously as tired, and greedy.

"This week, also, I have heard for the first time of Jim Leavell, who has just been made president of the largest bank in Chicago.

"Jim began in a little town in Missouri called Fulton.

"Why must I submit to the shame of not knowing thousands of such useful men, and be annoyed by hearing of such political mischief workers?

"Why do not such men as Dr. Dow and Jim Leavell have an influence on public life, and make it as creditable as they have made business? Why are these men unable to realize that there is a loose screw in their machinery that will wreck it unless attended to? The loose screw is politics; the introduction of the Russian idea into the United States of dividing factories, banks, farms, railroads, business of every kind, with the proletariat."

Sees Increase

PETER P. CARNEY

SALES OF ICE CREAM GAIN

Americans are consuming more ice cream each year and the demand for the product is steadily becoming less seasonal in character, Peter P. Carney, sales manager of the Liberty Dairy Products Corporation, said.

About 5,000,000 gallons of ice cream were sold in the Pittsburgh district last year, according to estimates made by Mr. Carney. This represented a gain over 1929, he declared.

Downtown stores and restaurants distributing ice cream at retail show little seasonal variation in their ice cream sales, but a slump still takes place in winter in the outlying sections. Mr. Carney expressed the opinion that retail sales effort will eventually make ice cream a year-round product in all neighborhoods.

As evidence of the growth in consumption of the product he pointed to the last census figures, which showed that production of ice cream in the United States in 1929 amounted to 242,374,080 gallons, valued at $288,615,467 at the factories. These figures represented increases of 6.8 per cent and 2.1 per cent, respectively, over 1927, the preceding census year.

POSTER VALUE DISCUSSED

Bigness is an important influence in the power of advertising and for this reason posters have always been one of the compelling factors in reaching the public, H. M. Smith, of the Liberty Show Print Company, declared.

In discussing other factors of poster production, Mr. Smith pointed to the fact that all history is noted by dates. Printing is the conveyor of information and the date is the most important factor in the story of history. With these facts in mind, it will be interesting to note that theatrical and circus people impress the date more forcibly than the event. For the day advertised is the most important in the individual life, the event secondary.

The date is consequently printed in the large type or figures on the poster. This idea of bigness is in itself attractive and commands attention. This phase of printing has been carried into the minds of business men, manufacturers and producers, so today window displays, wagon banners, factory charts, sales charts are demanded in the large sizes for no other reason than that they dominate and command attention.

As to color in printing, Mr. Smith said that it is not necessarily an attractive factor, but is a stimulating one, and holds attention if properly chosen. Common placing of color may become offensive or irritating.

In merchandising the selection of suitable colors should be regulated by considering the article, to whom we appeal, and the form of the presentation.

Gas Rates Ordered Cut in Oklahoma

The Oklahoma Corporation Commission has ordered a temporary reduction of 10 cents a thousand cubic feet in Oklahoma City rates of Oklahoma Natural Gas Corporation and has recessed hearing of the case until February 11.

Ford Plant Placed On Full-Time Basis

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—The Somerville (Mass.) plant of Ford Motor Company will place 4,200 employes on full-time basis commencing Monday, comparing with a two-day-week basis for the past two months.

Business Continues Drifting Course

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

BUSINESS HAS CONTINUED its drifting course since January 1. While production has expanded to some extent there has been no definite evidence of a change in the general economic trend.

The improvement which has taken place has been of less than normal seasonal proportions. No particularly impressive gain in industrial operations would be necessary to surpass the rate prevailing in December. Steel mill operations averaging about 46 per cent of capacity cannot be taken as an encouraging sign even though they are far above the low point of about 25 per cent recorded last month.

Automobile production has increased to some extent but the makers of motor cars have not launched any manufacturing schedules which have been extensive enough to materially affect the demand for steel and glass made in the Pittsburgh district.

No Bad Signs

WHILE CAREFUL EXAMINATION has revealed no tangible ground for the expectation of an immediate revival in business, there have been no indications of a further decline. The process of deflation seems to have run its course but trade and commerce have not gotten over being stunned from the painful operation. Industry is still in a dazed state and has not had time to start its convalescence.

The decline in commodity prices appears to have run its course. The slump in production has come to an end. But output has not received any marked stimulus and prices have not started to recover.

Bond Recovery Checked

A RISING BOND MARKET was one favorable business indication early in the month. The upward movement of these quotations was arrested last week by the uncertainty created by the possibility of a large government offering of securities to finance soldiers' bonus payments. The progress of new financing probably will be arrested until apprehension over this question has been quieted.

In line with the uncertainty in the trend of general business the stock market also has been drifting. Since the beginning of the new year quotations on equity securities have fluctuated within a narrow range with a light volume of trading. During most of the time the tone of the market has been firm but stock prices have made little progress in either direction.

No Liquidation

THERE HAS BEEN no heavy liquidation to depress stocks during the past month. On the other hand there has been little buying demand to push stocks to higher levels. In stocks, as in general business, deflation seems to have run its course. It probably would be too much to expect any vigorous market recovery in the face of discouraging earnings statements and in the absence of improvement in industrial operations.

Early in December it was predicted in this column that from four to six weeks of 1931 would have to elapse before the trend of business could be properly judged. It now seems probable that an even longer period must pass before the hopes for tangible improvement can be confirmed.

VIRGINIA MANOR HOME SOLD

At Virginia Manor, Mount Lebanon, the Southern Hills Land Company has sold to Leon E. Hickman, a member of the Allegheny County bar, and of the firm of Smith, Buchanan, Scott & Gordon, a New England colonial residence of eight rooms, three baths and attached two-car garage. The house is a long, rambling building of different contour elevations, both horizontally and vertically, with a wide porch following the recession of the front elevation and extending across the front entrance and flanked on the other end with an open roofed pergola porch for vines and roses.

The living room enters the open porch by a Dutch door, giving this room direct access to the open porch and gardens. The house is of the type of colonial residence found along the Boston Post road and is carried out in all essential details with the architecture of the period.

The property is situated at the corner of Midway road and Overlook avenue in the Virginia Manor plan, and the distinction of the house is accentuated by the planting of trees and shrubs. The main entrance of the house is centered on a large spreading tree which naturalizes the house beautifully to its situation. Lilacs, azaleas, roses, dogwood and mock orange give the yard the setting and atmosphere of the old colonial gardens. This is the second large property sold at Virginia Manor within the past two weeks, the other being the colonial house purchased by Arthur L. Schiel, of the H. J. Heinz Company.

New Bond Offerings Lower During Week

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—New bond offerings this week totaled $201,064,000, comparing with $101,747,000 last week and $127,321,000 in the like week in 1930.

To Offer Stocks Of Pittsburgh Thrift

At the annual meeting of the Pittsburgh Thrift Corporation, A. L. Burchfield and Dr. E. V. Weller were elected directors. Retiring directors were re-elected.

Stockholders approved an increase in the capitalization to $1,250,000, of which $250,000 is to be 7 per cent preferred stock of $100 par value. Present stockholders will be given preferred stock.

Henry Russell Miller, a director of the company and member of the executive committee stated that 1930 was the best year in the company's history. Not only were earnings greater but collections also showed improvement.

RUSSIAN SECT TO MIGRATE

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Another migration of the restless Dukhobors, Russian religious sect, is being arranged, David S. Russek, banker and land owner, of Chihuahua, Mexico, said here today.

Russek said he was on his way to Canada to aid in the pilgrimage of 20,000 Dukhobors from the Dominion to Mexico. He estimated moving expenses and the cost of the land they would occupy would total $12,000,000.

The Dukhobors, driven out of Russia, migrated to Canada, and many of them since have gone on other sporadic pilgrimages. Many of them have had frequent brushes with Canadian authorities over the school laws, and a radical wing has been in difficulty because of its custom of nudity.

Promises of more freedom and no governmental interference, the Mexican banker said, have led them to prepare to move to Mexico. Freight cars will be used to move them.

Three Men Held On Weapon Charge

North Side police today were holding three young men, who, police say, were found with loaded revolvers in their possession. The men were taken into custody while seated in an automobile in Painter way. When they were unable to give an account of themselves, they were searched and, police say, two revolvers were found. The prisoners identified themselves as Fred Smith, 18, of 3401 Forbes street; George Wentzel, 18, of 619 Suffolk street, and Regis Kaelim, 18, of 1426 East street.

Byrd Gets Cold Feet During Auto Ride

EL PASO, Tex., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, who lived for months through sub-zero temperatures in the Arctic and Antarctic complained of cold feet during a night automobile drive from El Paso to Roswell, N. M.

In an Alamogordo, N. M., cafe, the Admiral mentioned his benumbed condition. A clerk offered a blanket with which Byrd bundled up his feet.

PRINTING FIRM HAS RAPID GROWTH

Bletcher-Anchors Library Of Standing Forms Cuts Cost of Resetting Jobs

The library of standing forms which is maintained by the Bletcher-Anchors Company, printers, Rea Building, is a feature which has proved highly profitable to the customer. Once an order it set it is either electrotyped or stands in type for repeat business, thus eliminating the cost of resetting the order. This service means a substantial saving to the clients of the firm annually.

The Bletcher-Anchors firm has had rapid growth. The organization was formed in 1912 when Ralph E. Anchors and W. C. Bletcher purchased the Clark Printing Company, which was located at Wood street and Third avenue and employed only five workers. Continued growth of the firm has necessitated removal to larger qarters several times until it finally acquired its present commodious quarters in the Rea Building.

PLANT EQUIPMENT

In 1925 Mr. Anchors bought the interest of W. C. Bletcher and in 1927 R. P. Robertson and E. Ray Stiteler became financially interested in the company. Mr. Robertson is now president of the firm while Mr. Stiteler is treasurer and manager.

The firm's plant is equipped with a large battery of automatic flat bed cylinder and job presses, Ludlow typograph, Elrod lead, slug, border and material making equipment which, with the monotype, linotype, modern folders and other bindery and ruling machinery, places the plant on a par with the best job printing houses in the country.

FIRM FORMS NEW UNIT

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Over 85 per cent of the scales used in industry are for counting rather than weighing purposes and so are really accounting machines, Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines Corporation, stated in announcing formation of a new subsidiary to manufacture industrial weighing and counting scales with a range of uses from jewelers to foundrymen. Production has commenced at the company's Endicott, N. Y., plant and will be separate from its computing scale factory in Dayton, O.

One entirely new type of scale in the line automatically counts any quantity of uniform articles, such as washers, screws, piston pins, etc., placed on the weighing platform, when one of the same article is placed in a small separate pan on the scale. A ratio is thus established, enabling the number of pieces on the weighing platform to be read directly from the indicator.

Another new type measures the length of a bolt of cloth, by setting off the weight of a single yard and then reading the scale. Or, conversely, it will calculate the weight per yard of a given piece—an important factor in cost control on finishing certain types of fabrics which tend to vary widely in weight.

FORT PITT GETS STEEL ORDER

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 31.—Fabricated steel for the second unit of the Elevated Express highway, New York, traversing the Hudson River waterfront, will be manufactured by the Fort Pitt Bridge Company, Canonsburg, under contracts just completed. The company furnished the steel for the first unit, completed some time ago. The new unit, three-fourths of a mile long, extends from Fifty-ninth street to Seventy-second street, and will require 16,000 tons of steel.

The company, which has operated steadily during the depression, except for a partial shutdown due to shortage of water, plans to make delivery of first material early in the spring. It will take three months to complete the contract.

LOCAL TRADE SENTIMENT BETTER

Greater Activity Shown In Number of Lines; Crude Production Up

Business conditions are showing slightly greater activity in a number of lines and a slightly better sentiment prevails in business circles, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Retail trade is rather quiet and jobbers have not increased their sales very materially as yet. Retailers' stocks are reported as averaging much lower than usual, they still continue to buy in small amounts and demand for spring merchandise is not very active as yet.

Jobbers report a fair demand for winter items which are being disposed of at cut prices. There has been some improvement in the demand for furniture and household goods, with the usual February sales already started. Hardware, paints and chemicals continue in rather light demand, and with building operations still at a low level, demand for lumber and other building materials is slow.

COLLECTIONS SLOW

There has been no material improvement in the demand for sanitary and heating equipment, business in those lines being adversely affected by the low volume of building construction. The volume of business in radio lines continues well below that of a year ago, and there appears to still be considerable dicstress merchandise on the market. Operations in electrical equipment lines still continues at a moderate rate and jobbing business is not very active at present.

Production of crude oil is at a slightly higher rate, with prices showing little change. Production of bituminous coal is averaging about 15 per cent lower than last year at this time, and demand and prices continue rather unsatisfactory.

While collections continue slow with jobbers, there has been a slight improvement reported in some quarters.

PLATE GLASS ORDERS GAIN

The increased activity noted a week ago in the amount of orders placed with manufacturers for window glass did not continue, according to National Glass Budget. Apparently the jobbers only covered their very immediate requirements after inventories and are content to conduct business on the least permissible amount of stock, as up until the middle of this week there was not a great deal of new business being booked by the producers. As to market conditions they are not showing any increased tendency toward stability. Just what this flexibility will result in a little later is problematical. Existing practices are no doubt having some effect on the amount of glass that will be moved.

Orders for plate glass are gradually increasing and, for the next two months at least, a considerable amount of plate will likely be moved into the hands of firms that are engaged in the automobile manufacturing business. The motor industry for some time past has been ordering a considerable amount of steel and similar materials that are used in the construction of automobiles. Now the production of new models has reached the point where some of the glass is required for their completion. The usual quietness that generally prevails in the construction business, as well as the mirror industry, during the first 60 days of each year is in evidence.

BUCKEYE AIDED BY NEW OIL LINES

Pipe Connection With Gulf Likely to Boost Company's Operations

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Buckeye Pipe Line Company is likely to benefit to some extent from construction of new crude oil lines from the midcontinent by Ajax Pipe Line Company, in which Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has chief interest, and by Gulf Oil Corporation.

Buckeye will take oil from the Gulf's line for delivery to the Toledo refinery which was acquired last year by Gulf from Paragon Refining Company and is now being enlarged to 20,000 barrels capacity from 7,000 barrels. Buckeye heretofore delivered oil to Paragon at this plant. No new delivery point is involved, but added capacity of the plant gives Buckeye prospect for increased deliveries.

PITTSBURGH OUTLET

However, a new outlet for Buckeye will be the new Gulf refinery at Pittsburgh, now completed. This plant, which started operations at the rate of 6,000 barrels daily, seems the most likely source of an increase in Buckeye operations in the new pipe line connection.

In the case of the Ajax line, Buckeye will receive oil formerly taken by it from Prairie Pipe Line Company's carrier. This oil will be brought through the new 400-mile line of Ajax to a point near St. Louis, where it will be taken by lines of the Illinois Pipe Line Company to be delivered in the eastward movement to Buckeye at the Indiana-Ohio border. The latter will deliver the crude oil to the Toledo and Cleveland refineries of Standard Oil Company of Ohio. This represents a rerouting of oil that Buckeye formerly handled.

1930 NET OFF

Deliveries of crude oil by Buckeye during 1930 totaled 29,552,840 barrels, compared with 1929 deliveries of 34,428,996 barrels. Other pipe line operations of the company during 1930 were also below the 1929 figures. The company's net income for the year will show a decrease from the $1,153,268 reported for 1929, after all deductions, which was equivalent to $5.76 a share on 200,000 shares of $50 par stock.

6 HURT AS AUTO HITS WALL

Two of six persons injured last night when an automobile in which they were riding was forced off the Library road, near Castle Shannon, were in South Side Hospital today.

Those in the hospital are Victor Haney, 34, and Francis McDermott, 12, of Nemacolin, Greene County. Other victims, cut and bruised, were McDermott's father, Thomas, 37, the driver; his wife, their son, Thomas, Jr., 14, and Ruth Haney, 20, all of Nemacolin.

Mrs. Rebecca Freidman, 35, of 1226 Wylie avenue, was cut and bruised this morning when struck by an automobile while crossing Wylie avenue at Logan street. Police say the woman refused to go to the Mercy Hospital for treatment and was taken home. Later she was taken to the Passavant Hospital. William Wilson, 19, a Negro, of 2235 Mahon street, alleged driver of the car, was arrested on a reckless driving charge.

BURGESS WARS ON SPEEDERS

Motorists driving in Homestead must observe the 10-mile speed limit signs while passing safety zones Burgess John Cavanaugh said today in declaring safety to citizens was more to be desired than the friendship of all politicians.

The decision to enforce the regulation followed the injuring of Oliver Wise, 31, of Fifth avenue, Homestead, when a car driven, police said, by Tony Wallace, of City Farm lane, Homestead, crashed into the zone at Eighth avenue and Amity street, Thursday. Wise was taken to the Homestead Hospital suffering severe injuries of the head. Other pedestrians had narrow escapes from injury Cavanaugh was told.

Early Groundhog Harbinger of Cold

While the sun shone on one of Helena's busiest intersections yesterday a groundhog scurried for cover considerably ahead of its February 2. The animal, property of a wood hauler, had escaped from its owner's wagon.

STOCKS MOVE IRREGULARLY AT START

U. S. Steel and Can Open Unchanged—Auburn Sags, Worthington Pump Gains

NEW YORK, Jan. 31. — (AP.) — The stock market opened narrowly irregularly today. Worthington Pump, one of yesterday's strong features, rallied 1½ and there were half point gains in American Telephone and Standard Oil of New Jersey. United States Steel and American Can were unchanged. Auburn lost 2 points. International Telephone, Westinghouse, Bethlehem Steel, Allied Chemical and Du Pont sagged about ½.

Most of the offerings in the first few minutes of trading were in specialties and the steadiness of the pivotal industrials and utilities gave the market a firmer tone by the end of the first half hour. U. S. Steel, after sagging ⅛, rallied half a point net. American Telephone and American Can recovered fractional declines and Auburn Auto made up its loss.

There was a forward movement in the farm implements, led by International Harvester and Case, each of which rose a point. Nash Motors, Atchison, Norfolk and Western and Eastman Kodak were others showing moderate gains. Paramount firmed in response to the estimate of record earnings for 1930.

The early selling brought losses of 1 to 1½ in Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Penick and Ford, Foster Wheeler, General Refractories and Caterpillar Tractor. Ingersoll Rand was also heavy.

Foreign exchanges were steady. Sterling cables opened unchanged at $4.85⅝.

EXPORT COPPER PRICE CUT

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—The price of export copper was reduced one-quarter of a cent a pound today to 10.05 cents a pound, c. i. f., European base ports.

The reduction followed a similar cut in the domestic price of the metal yesterday and brings the foreign price on a parity with the domestic quotation of 9¾ cents a pound.

The former price was 10.30 cents for first quarter delivery and 10.35 cents for April.

Atlantic Refining Earns $1.02 Share

Atlantic Refining Company and subsidiaries report profit for year 1930 of $2,742,000, compared with $17,332,000 for the year 1929. Both figures are after interest, depreciation, taxes, inventory, adjustment, etc. After preferred dividends, earnings per share in 1930 on average common shares outstanding were $1.02, against $6.79 for 1929.

Officers Re-Elected By Union Trust Co.

At a meeting of directors of the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh yesterday, all officers were re-elected to serve during the year of 1931. Directors also elected E. Foster Andrews as assistant manager of the safe deposit department and Louis R. Schmertz, Jr., as assistant manager of the bond department.

ALMA RUBENS DESCRIBES FIRST HERO

Scar-Faced Fireman Charmed Future Movie Star, But He Was Impervious to Wiles

mutter something that sounded like "lunatic," or "nuts," and hang up, much to my despair.

But I did not give up hope. Rose La France would overcome all obstacles. True love never did run smooth. Rose La France, in the end, would accomplish her purpose. Rose La France. That was the name I would make famous. And that was the name my hero would acclaim when I reached the top, thus heaping coals of fire on his head for not reciprocating my love advances earlier.

So, the days and weeks and months slipped by until they approached the day of my confirmation.

As the event drew near, a harum-scarum idea, akin to genius, struck me. Its very originality, as well as its boldness, made me gasp and alternate between chills and fever of suspense and guilt lest my mother should discover my purpose.

For days I had nurtured a sullen and exasperating hurt over my inability to break down the barriers of my scar-faced hero's reserve.

Family Poor

I had attributed this to my appearance. My street clothes, while not slattern, were not just exactly modish, or smart. My family, while not in actual poverty, were to be classed among the respectable, and consequently inconspicuous poor, too poor to buy for me the silks and satins for which my girlish heart yearned.

Even to this day I do not fully grasp, I suppose, the sacrifices that dreary, scrupulous saving from out of the meager family budget which my unflagging mother underwent to provide the gorgeous confirmation dress her never too weary fingers fitted and sewed under the harsh glare of the gas jets in moments snatched from heavy household cares and precious sleep.

A new dress, hat, shoes, a pair of silk hose, or any other new piece of wearing apparel was to me, in those days, in the nature of an event. They were milestones marking periods in my development. They symbolized something pregnant with epochal meaning. This was especially true of this confirmation dress and also my first wedding gown which my poor mother also hand-sewed under the most heart-breaking circumstances.

Confirmation Dress

To every girl, I presume, as in my own case, her confirmation dress is not only a vision, but a creation of supreme delight. It is her sacred robe of vestal purity and a symbol to the world that she has emerged forever from the era of childhood into the long-cherished plane of a full-grown woman.

The cracked mirror in my room told me that I was beautiful. I was the picture of a bride, the gown, the veil, and the flowers.

I was a bride. His bride. My triumph was at hand!

My hero could not resist me when he saw me arrayed like this.

On a pretense I sailed out of the house ahead of my sister and parents. All a-quiver, my heart thumping like a pump, I fairly darted up to where my loved one stood in front of the firehouse.

Maybe he would accompany me to the church and see me transformed by a few simple words from a little girl into a woman. Maybe he would make it a double ceremony and marry me, then and there.

The Hero Resisted

Over and over in my mind I had repeated the words that would lead him to declare himself; declare his love for me, his vestal bride.

"Take me, my darling groom of grooms. Oh, take me while I am so beautiful, my handsome, my brave lover knight."

But, when I approached him I became tongue-tied and blushed with confusion. The words would not come. He stared at me in quizzical fashion.

Just then a fat woman, with a baby in her arms, came up and stood by his side. He whispered something to her and then they both ogled me from head to foot.

And, as I stood there, too embarrassed and sickened to flee, he burst into a lusty roar of laughter.

"Damn me, Maggie, if the little minx ain't an actress!" he chortled with glee. "Yes, sir, she's an actress, as sure as you're born."

I was thoroughly terrified until my mother and father came along a moment later and dragged me away. My romance was a disillusionment, my dreams of love had gone awry.

The confirmation ceremony itself is somewhat blurred in my memory. I went through it all in a daze.

All that I could think of was that Rose La France's hero was married and a father.

And, he had called me a minx! Wasn't that a piece of fur?

And, an actress! Well, that part was true. At least I intended being one—and a famous one at that. He'd be sorry some of these days.

Stage Name

Boldly, when the priest asked my name, I replied:

"Rose La France!"

So, Rose La France, the actress to be, I had become at last.

My parents were horrified.

"By golly, Alma," my father chided me on the way home. "What made you say that? Where did you hear that name?"

"That's my stage name," I replied stubbornly. "That's the name you'll see in the electric lights over Grauman's Theater one of these days. Just you wait and see!"

My father sadly shook his head and said no more, but mother, upon our arrival home, threatened me with dire punishment unless I relegated the idea to the scrap-heap of forgotten things.

So, in the face of this bitter parental criticism and opposition, two years drifted by without any serious efforts on my part to further my stage ambitions.

From time to time, when I was able to raise the money, my chum, Nellie Kyne, and I played hookey from school and attended Grauman's, a legitimate house, and the movies.

My earliest hero in the movies and my next great secret love was Arthur Johnson, that tall, slim, leading man of a decade and a half ago, who was the first of the silvered screen's truly great lovers.

The next man to kindle a love fire in the scrawny, ambitious child was Arthur Johnson, one of the first of the movies' matinee idols. Did it leave a lasting imprint on her life? Read Monday's instalment of this gripping tale of laughter, tears and dope.

SLEUTH REPORT GIVEN PARK

A report of Chief George W. Murren to District Attorney Andrew T. Park on activities of the County Detective Bureau in 1930, shows that during the year the bureau made a total of 1,123 arrests, of which 26 were murderers; conducted 6,561 investigations, and recovered 239 stolen automobiles.

Of the 46 murders during the year, six of the slayers are known, but still at large, while 14 still are unknown.

One hundred and twenty-seven arrests were made on charges of robbery, and 42 for highway robbery.

Thirty-four persons were arrested in connection with accidental automobile deaths, and were released by the coroner. 24 were arrested on manslaughter charges in connection with automobile deaths, 16 were arrested as murder suspects and released, 27 for felonious assault and battery, 50 on foreign warrants served for out-of-town officers, 23 for conducting gambling houses, 63 for maintaining gambling devices, 66 for illegal liquor violations, 59 for larceny, 55 for conducting lotteries, 36 for violation of election laws and 55 for visiting gambling houses.

The report of the custodian showed that he received 137 slot machines during the year, of which 134, valued at $15,000, were destroyed. Money confiscated from these and turned over to the county treasurer, amounted to $806.50.

PUPILS STUDY BROADCASTING

Boys of the radio club and radio class of the Clifford B. Connelley Trade School, Crawford and Bedford avenues, visited Westinghouse radio station KDKA at Saxonburg yesterday to study broadcasting operation.

The school is one of the few in the country teaching radio servicing as a trade. It operates an amateur transmitting station with call letters W8BQZ under the Federal Radio Commission, and goes on the air daily.

The shop is equipped with a short wave station, consisting of an aero 150-watt assembled kit, a super-wasp receiver and television set. The transmitter is housed in a special glass enclosed room on the balcony of the radio shop.

It uses two 852 oscillators and two 860 mercury rectifiers with 2,500 volts plate potential, operating on a fundamental of 7,000 kilocycles and a wave length of 40 meters. The station is operated by students holding authorized amateur licenses and is on the air for 20 minutes of each hour during the day and for one hour during night school.

Legality of Briggs Marriage Upheld

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Marie C. Briggs, who claimed a common law marriage to Clare A. Briggs, cartoonist, is his lawful widow, the appellate division of the Supreme Court decided. The decision upheld a decision of the Surrogates Court.

Marie C. Briggs' claims for a share in the estate were contested by Ruth Owen Briggs, who divorced the cartoonist June 4, 1929.

Queen Ill as Boris Observes Birthday

SOFIA, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—King Boris, of Bulgaria, celebrated his thirty-seventh birthday yesterday, but the queen and the king's brother and sister were unable to attend the ceremonies because of attacks of grip. Despite her illness Queen Ioanna knitted her husband a sweater as a gift. It appeared to please him more than some of his more costly gifts.

Bandits Rob Three, Man Resisting Cut

IVERNESS, Fla., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—William Floring, of Hinesdale, Ill., was severly wounded in a fight with five bandits who robbed him and his son and daughter-in-law, also of Hinesdale, of $132 south of this city.

Floring was cut on the face and neck when he resisted the robbers. Police arresting five suspects said they recovered the money from them.

Treasury Bill Issue Far Oversubscribed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Secretary Mellon announced an issue of $60,030,000 90-day treasury bills offered last Tuesday had been heavily oversubscribed.

To total amount applied for was $327,305,000. The highest bid was 99.782 and the lowest accepted was 99.753.

PAIN GETS BETTER BACK FEELS FINE after Musterole—safe "counter-irritant"—is applied once an hour for 5 hours. Many feel better after first application.

MUSTEROLE

AND UGLY BLEMISHES

Don't be ashamed to have a pimply face embarrass you! Get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights, if you are like thousands of others.

Help cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel. Thousands substitute pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and that is effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immediately effective results. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

WEBER-FIELDS, WILL ROGERS ON AIR

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

It seems the broadcasters at last have overcome their fear of Saturday night.

Once Saturday night was the weakest of the seven in entertainment. No big names, rarely a celebrated orchestra—all because of a hunch that no one stayed at home but "Shep" and the Persian kitten.

Dutch Minstrel Days changed that notion.

To cap the climax we have as guests tonight those Dutch comedians of 60 years' standing—Weber and Fields—WCAE at 8.

By popular demand the Jesters are to repeat their version of "The Peanut Vendor" on KDKA at 7:15.

* * *

QUESTION A DAY:

Is Wayne King a graduate of Yale and was he born in the South?—Harriet S., Steubenville, O.

Answer—Wayne graduated from the Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, Ind. He was born in Savanna, Ill., 30 years ago, but received his early education in Texas, Arizona and Mexico. He has a Southern accent.

* * *

SIGN HIM UP!

A small orchestra was getting along fine in its audition at a local studio recently when the program manager thought he would have a little fun.

To show the boys how difficult this continuity business is he explained that few orchestras get the idea of what is required in theme music.

"For instance," he said, "If you boys were to introduce a burlesque sketch on the insurance business, what would you play?"

The leader looked vacant for a moment then called for No. 31—"My Heart Stood Still."

* * *

Red Nichols of "Red Hot Pennies" fame, makes his bow to WCAE fans at 11:15, taking the place of Horace Heidt, who comes to us now from WLW.

* * *

Speaking of Horace Heidt we're reminded that 15 men in his band play 210 instruments. At will he can present a chorus of 15 violins, 15 trumpets, 15 clarinets, or—heaven forbid—15 jews harps.

* * *

"I Love Life," the selection which Chauncey Parsons sang with much fervor at the KDKA anniversary banquet, is a part of George Cehanovsky's concert on WCAE tomorrow night at 9:15. Toreador Song from "Carmen" is another.

Senator Smith's Cotton Plan.

"Crop Planting and Crop Surpluses" will be discussed by Senator Smith, of South Carolina.

A member of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Senator Smith long has been a student of the problems facing the cotton and grain farmers of the country.

Senator Smith has worked out a plan under which farmers would be able to buy cotton or wheat from the Federal Farm Board at the present market price and hold for a rise in prices. He believes that in this way production during the next year would be curtailed, last year's surplus absorbed and prices advanced.

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Vigorous melodrama loses much of its punch on the air because of the verboten signs against profanity, against even the use of a good and resounding "damn."

Radio authors still have to have recourse to the expression of mid-Victorian novelists to convey the note of anger and astonishment, to "Great Caesar" and "By the great Lord Harry."

So far, the broadcasters show no hurry to get their restless voices on the more profane plays—such things as "What Price Glory" and "Arizona."

* * *

We just can't imagine "What Price Glory" on the microphone with American doughboys forced to nicenellie their language, forced to say "By the great Lord Harry."

The broadcasters must chafe at their limitations. Probably they would like to set their teeth into rousing, vital drama but they must pass it by and seize instead innocuous comedy or drama from which any approach to what Pershing calls "honest indignation" has been removed.

* * *

One of the greatest misfortunes that can befall a radio announcer is to see a prize fight end in the first round. The broadcasters, since the last Dempsey-Tunney fight, have had bad luck with the more important ring battles. No sooner is there an end to the foul confusion which formerly characterized the bouts than a wallop landed in the opening round knocks their plans sky high.

* * *

Were they honest-to-nobody racketeers, as well as broadcasters, they would long ago have gathered with fighters and their managers, particularly the managers, in some secret and soundproof room and arrived at some reliable economic policy where listeners would be guaranteed their armchairs' worth.

* * *

E. M. Wickes, a leading historian of Tin Pan Alley, offers some illuminating facts on the rewards of the melody men. They make us long to get hold of an old German folk song album and try our hand at adaptation, to jazz up for a jazz civilization forgotten but tinkly old tunes. It is a profitable employment, this writing of songs. Listen, my comrades, to Wickes:

"Probably you recall that a wise bird once remarked that he would rather write the songs of a nation than make its laws. It appears to me that almost any smart bird would cherish the same preference under present conditions, unless he were looking to become President of the United States—more for the glory than the coin.

"A Class AA songwriter today receives approximately $5,000 yearly from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. All he pays is $10 yearly dues.

"A songwriter can't be in Class AA unless he has hits riding almost continuously, and when he is in this class you can rest assured that his royalties amount to at least $25,000 for the year. Plenty of state and federal lawmakers would be tickled pink to earn half this sum yearly."

The group, representative of the citizenry in drought-stricken states, will remain anonymous. Rogers will speak before and after the unnamed speakers have told their stories.

A farmer, a farmer's wife, a boy and a girl will be heard. They will describe the suffering brought by the drought to their families and friends and the need for raising the $10,000,000 relief fund sought by the Red Cross.

3 ROBBERS GET LONG TERMS

Three youths were under heavy sentences to the Western Penitentiary today, following their pleas to guilty to charges of robbery and burglary before Judge George V. Moore in Criminal Cour yesterday.

John Campbell, 21, released from the Moundsville, W. Va., penitentiary siv weeks ago, was to begin a sentence of from 15 to 50 years for 10 burglaries, eight of which were perpetrated in Mt Lebanon and two in Dormont.

Jack Dudley, 20, Negro, of Penn Township, was under sentence of from 15 to 50 years for seven taxicab robberies, and James Lewis, 21, Negro, of Penn Township, indicted with Dudley, was under sentence of from 10 to 25 years for two taxi robberies.

Quickest Way To Knock a Cold

Millions Say of This Proved Way

You Feel Like a New Person Almost Before You Know It

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something you know does the business—don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy, not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. Soon those mean, aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up; poisons leave your system. Almost before you know it, you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Costs only a few cents.

STAR HELD BACK BY NON-DRAFT RULE

THE PURCHASE OF Russell (Buzz) Arlett, slugging outfielder, by the Philadelphia Nationals from the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League, demonstrates more than the fact that under a new regime, headed by President Lewis C. Ruch, the Phillies have adopted a policy of buying baseball players, instead of selling them, as in the past. For it shows also, even at this early date, how the minor league pastimers have been benefited by the restoration of the draft, and how the old system worked out to their disadvantage until the non-draft circuits were compelled recently to accept the regulations now in force.

Lewis C. Ruch

Here's a player good enough to have come up to the major loops many seasons ago, but because the Coast League permitted the drafting only of men who had been in the majors before, he never got a chance. Big league clubs made numerous attempts to buy him, but were unsuccessful for the reason that the price put on him was so high as to be considered exorbitant.

IF ARLETT HAD been subject to draft, the Oakland club would have been forced to sell him at reasonable figures rather than run the risk of losing him through the selective system for a much smaller sum. In that even, Buzz would have been given an opportunity long ago to advance to the big show and get a far better salary.

But as the universal draft did not apply to their league until a couple of weeks ago, the Oakland owners were in no danger of losing the player in that manner, and by putting a prohibitive price on him they could keep him as long as they wished to do so. While the would-be purchasers and those holding title to his services were haggling annually about the price, and never reaching an agreement, an innocent and helpless party, the player, was paying the penalty of an unjust system.

THE RESULT OF it was that Arlett, one of the best prospects in the country, was forced to remain with one club in the minor leagues, at a minor league salary, for a period of 13 years. Much of that time he would have been up in the majors drawing much better pay.

In being denied his opportunity until now, he has not only lost the salary difference he could have been collecting from year to year, but his coming to the big show has been delayed until he is 31 years old, an age that means he can't last long if he does come through, and an age that may ruin his chances for making good at all.

FEW BASEBALL MEN doubt that, if given a trial at the right time, Arlett would have made his mark in the fast set. What he will be able to do now, at the age of 31, is a question, though he has been the most consistent hitter on the Coast. Buzz started as a pitcher with Oakland 13 years ago, but after three seasons an injury to his pitching arm forced him to the outfield. Babe Herman says he is the best switch hitter in baseball, that is one who bats either right or left-handed according to the pitching. Arlett's averages for the last eight years have been .330, .328, .344, .382, .351, .365, .374 and .361. For six seasons he has averaged more than 25 home runs and more than 140 runs knocked in per year. Yet he has had to stay in the minors.*

Jim Tanguay

THERE MAY APPEAR to be some slight suggestion of incongruity in the course of an athlete who is banished as a football player because of a lack of even ordinary aggressiveness and then goes in for boxing, which calls for more aggressiveness than any other sport on the calendar.

But that is the step just taken by Jim Tanguay, of New York University. He was a keen disappointment in football last fall. He started out in promising style as a backfield ace, but appeared to have no fight in him when the big games arrived, and the Fordham contest almost sounded his gridiron deathknell.

SO BARREN OF aggressiveness was Tanguay in that number that he was kept on the bench all through the game with Carnegie Tech here, and later against Georgia he was permitted to play only a few minutes when Coach Chick Meehan had no other man available.

In a game that puts such a premium on aggressiveness as does boxing there would seem to be no chance for a student who was too docile even for football. But maybe Tanguay wants to practice getting mad in preparation for the next gridiron season. Some gloved insults on the chin may bring about a change in temperament and provide the missing spark to make him a success on the barred field.

NO CHARGES OF athletic overemphasis can be aimed at the methods of Nat Holman, basketball coach at College of the City of New York. Here's the way he addressed his players after they had lost to St. John's for the second time this season: "I want you to forget all about basketball and crack the mid-year exams. Notices will be sent out when I want you to report again. You lost two games to St. John's, but you did not lose a thing by those defeats. You were playing a fine team and you learned a lot of basketball. Now try to show those professors that you have learned just as much in the classroom."

THERE ARE TIMES when it doesn't pay to play a waiting game. It's better to grab the first thing offered. Freddie Sington, Alabama's famous all-America football tackle, has just made that discovery in connection with his plans to embark upon a professional baseball career after his graduation from the Tuscaloosa University next June.

Some time ago, the New York Yankees offered Sington a good contract, though they didn't know much about him. Freddie snubbed the offer and said he didn't care to play pro baseball. Recently he changed his mind and applied for a job with the Yanks, only to be informed that they would have none of him. Scouts had investigated the collegian, reporting that he had not progressed as a baseball player and that his throwing arm lacked the power demanded in the big leagues.

SOME OTHER SPORTS may have slumped in 1930, but it was the biggest year that golf ever had. The total number of courses in the United States grew to 5,856, of which 2,414 have 18 holes and 3,442 have nine holes. During the year these courses were patronized by 1,897,241 players.

Johnny Layton

Against a major league baseball attendance of 11,000,000, almost 15,000,000 rounds of golf were played in the 11 big league cities. There was an increase of 20 per cent in players, and 12 per cent were women. The growth in women's golf during the last five years has been phenomenal.

THE DETHRONEMENT OF Johnny Layton as three-cushion king was another development showing the present season to be the most disastrous on record for professional billiard champions. The jinx camped on the trail of the champs has made a perfect score of three out of three to date. First Willie Hoppe was beaten by Welker Cochran for the world 18.1 balkline title, which Hoppe had held for 24 years; next Ralph Greenleaf was forced to surrender to Erwin Rudolph the world pocket-billiard honors which he had won 11 times in the last 13 years, and then Layton's three-year reign as three-cushion ruler was ended by Arthur Thurnblad. Edgar T. Appleby and Robert Harper have successfully defended the amateur 18.2 and three-cushion titles, respectively, but the pro champs appear to be completly out of luck. The first clean sweep within memory will go into the records if somebody now wrests the world 18.2 balkline laurels from Young Jake Schafer.

GOV. PINCHOT TO REPLACE BOYLE

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 31. — (INS.)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot is expected to announce two new appointments to the State Athletic Commission tonight at the Veteran Athletes' annual dinner here, according to reports today in Philadelphia sport circles.

Ralph Marlow, of Philadelphia, secretary to Judge Eugene Bonniwell, twice Democratic candidate for governor, and Richard Guy, of Pittsburgh, it is said, are to be the two new appointees. They will succeed Frank Wiener, of Philadelphia, the present chairman, and Havey J. Boyle, Pittsburgh newspaperman.

Harry J. Farrell, of Nanticoke, the third member of the commission, is expected to retain his post and be named chairman.

Both Gov. and Mrs. Pinchot will be among the honored guests at the Veteran Athletes' banquet. Judge Bonniwell is toastmaster and president of the association.

VETERAN SPORTS LEADER

Richard Guy, slated to be the new boxing commissioner for Pennsylvania from the Pittsburgh district, is a veteran newspaperman. He was sports editor for years of the old Pittsburgh Gazette-Times and later of the Pittsburgh Leader. He is at present athletic director of St. Vincent College at Latrobe, Pa. He was the organizer of the Middle Atlantic League and later of the Pennsylvania League and directed the Greensburg team in the latter circuit. He also was the sponsor of the old Pittsburgh Collegians baseball team for more than 20 years and has served as scout of several major league baseball clubs. His elaborate background of knowledge of sports should fit him well for his new berth. He resides in Wilkinsburg.

Commissioner Boyle has held that office since 1923, when he was appointed a member of the original board by Gov. Pinchot, with the legalizing of boxing in the state. He was reappointed twice later. He is sports editor of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and at the time of his first appointment was sports editor of the Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

SHUTE LEADS TEXAS OPEN

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Professional shooters seeking a slice of the $6,500 Texas Open golf melon today found themselves faced with the same problem that confronted them just a year ago—how to head off Densmore Shute.

The dark, young Columbus (O.) star, was looking back on the field today at the start of the second lap of the 72-hole event. Shute started off with a brilliant 66 yesterday, five under par, to tie the competitive record for the layout.

Where the defending champion shared low honors with Al Espinosa after last year's initial round, each with a 68, he had things all to himself today.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: SHAKESPEARE NEVER SAW AN ACTRESS—Until 1660, the English Theater was an exclusively masculine organization. Men and boys enacted all of the roles. The heroine usually was acted by a beardless boy, while older feminine characters would be represented by fully grown men. The England of Shakespeare's time placed actors in the same category with vagrants and malefactors. A woman on the stage would have invited the most summary treatment on the part of the civil authorities and the audience. Not until after the Restoration did English public opinion of the theater become more liberal. SIGNATURE OF THE ALMIGHTY—The Hebrew word "Emeth" (Truth) is considered to be the signature of the Almighty. Beginning with the first and ending with the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet, it symbolizes God's Eternalness. The Sages of the Talmud narrate that, on frequent occasions, scrolls fell from heaven, inscribed with this word, (the autograph of the Almighty) in answer to prayers. The Alpha and Omega of the church is derived from this Hebrew word. (See: Talmud Yoma, 69, b.)

ALTOONA BEATS WESTINGHOUSE

Non-league basketball games marked a heavy scholastic schedule yesterday, only one W. P. I. A. L. and three junior school league games being played. In the lone W. P. I. A. L. tilt, Beaver bumped Rochester High, 26 to 16. Herron Hill and Washington Trade won City Junior games, and Calhoun copped a W. P. I. A. L. junior contest. Westinghouse, Section 1, City Senior League leader, was defeated by Altoona, 17-16.

Tarentum High bowed to Butler, 28-22; Ambridge took Aliquippa, 30-13; Stowe lost to the Duke Preps, 29-11; Rocky Grove upset Meadville, 27-25; Perry High knocked out Shady Side Academy, 28-19; Duquesne Freshmen tripped Oliver High, 26-11, and Connelley won over Verona, 44-19.

Scott High, of North Braddock, won from Wilkinsburg, 36-17; Monessen downed Waynesburg, 22-8; Monongahela bowed to McKeesport, 31-19; Homestead trimmed Braddock, 28-21; Elizabeth took a beating from Fifth Avenue High, 22-16, and Ben Avon whipped Bridgeville, 46-13.

Ford City was Har-Brack's 34-21 victim; Etna knocked off Millvale, 33-14; Edgewood defeated East Pittsburgh, 13-9, and Charleroi took it on the chin at the hands of Ellsworth, 30-28.

New Castle copped from Washington, 29-19; Greensburg beat Derry Township, 23-8; Munhall was nosed out by W. P. D. I., 31-30; Coraopolis barely beat McDonald, 13-12, and Rankin topped Swissvale, 35-25.

Turtle Creek set down Allderdice, 39-22; Burgettstown topped Bentleyville, 23-20; Canonsburg won over Cecil, 29-14, and Franklin beat Titusville, 37-6.

Gooch and Hill, Former Bucs, Visit Here

Johnny Gooch, former Pirate catcher, accompanied by Mrs. Gooch, is in Pittsburgh for a few days to attend to some business matters. Gooch is leaving the big leagues for the first time since he came up to the Buccaneers from Birmingham in the Southern Association in the fall of 1921. The Cincinnati club last Saturday traded him to Baltimore in the International League for Frank (Dundee) Rodgers, Stowe-Rocks outfielder.

Carmen Hill, former Pirate slab star, who is now a member of the Rochester Club of the International League, also is visiting here. Hill appears to be in good condition and he looks forward to a big season.

KIKI MAY PLAY CENTER FIELD

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Joe McCarthy regarded Hazen Cuyler as the best performer in the National League, but McCarthy's judgment in keeping Kiki in rightfield when the central patrol called for help was questioned by many Pittsburghers. The matter is of considerable interest at this time owing to a report which states that Manager Rogers Hornsby may switch the ball hawk to center.

Kiki Cuyler.

That Cuyler can do more things better than any outfielder in the sport is the contention of many baseball players. When Scoops Carey injured one of his legs in the 1925 flag drive Cuyler jumped into the middle zone and made a remarkable impression all over the league. His speed, wonderful throwing arm and surehandedness were a source of worry to the batters and baserunners.

Hack Wilson is a good outfielder, but everybody knows that Hack cannot get over the ground like Cuyler, and the centerfield plot calls for plenty of dash. Then, too, Wilson has had considerable trouble with his legs yet McCarthy allowed him to stay in his position when he could not get to balls that would be easy for an ordinary player.

Manager Jewel Ens of the Pirates, as well as this writer, were among those who wondered why McCarthy didn't make a switch that surely would have won some games. Balls dropped in many a game that the Michigan hawk would [illegible] swooped under in time for a catch.

GAMES TONIGHT.
Cleveland at Pittsburgh.
London at Buffalo.

By CARL W. SHATTO.

The most ancient and probably the most bitter rivalry known to United States hockey will be revived at Duquesne Garden tonight when the Yellow Jackets meet the Cleveland Indians, defending champions of the International League.

Pittsburgh and Cleveland first battled it out for supremacy on the ice 30 years ago, at which time Pittsburgh, recognized as national champion, easily subdued the Ohioans, little skilled in the sport. Since that time the teams representing the two cities have engaged in many fierce combats. Sometimes the stakes have been high (as was often the case in the old U. S. A. H. A., when a championship was involved) and sometimes nothing in particular has been the prize, but invariably the milling has been torrid and the attendant interest intense.

FOURTH PLACE AT STAKE

Tonight's game should compare favorably with the most hectic of Pittsburgh-Cleveland thrillers, for it so happens that the battle is regarded by both teams as the most crucial in which they have engaged this season. The Indians come here in fourth place, leading the Jackets by a single point in the standings. One point represents only a half-game, so the locals can wrest fourth place from the invaders by turning in a triumph.

To the hockey fan not particularly interested in the rules governing championship competition fourth place may appear a rather insignificant spot over which to become exercised, but the Jackets and Indians know that fourth place is the last playoff berth, and that it's just as valuable as first place at getting a team into the post-season titular classic.

INDIANS TROUBLED

The Indians are finding championship defending a very difficult and troublesome business. Buffalo, Windsor and London have passed the champs in the race, and should Pittsburgh get in front of Cleveland and stay there the Indians probably will fail to qualify to defend their crown. Detroit, back on its feet after signing two new stars, is only a game and a half out of fourth place. The race is so close that the game tonight may decide which team is to share in the championship spoils.

It is little short of a disgrace for champions to fail to qualify for defense of their laurels. The Indians, in a savage mood and very much on the warpath, intend to escape such grief at the expense of Pittsburgh.

The fans who know their Jackets (and there are thousands of 'em) don't have to be told the locals' attitude toward the Cleveland plot. Cleveland and Buffalo are the only teams that Pittsburgh hasn't downed this season. The Schooley skaters made it very hot for the Bisons here Thursday, when they dispensed bruises impartially and absorbed a fine lesson in fierce milling, and they don't intend to deal any less kind-

SPORT SHORTS

PINEHURST, N. C.—Robert G. Morrison, of Oakmont, lost the final of the St. Valentine's tournament to F. H. Gates, of Montclair, N. J., 2 and 1, here yesterday. On an adjoining course, Mrs. Harry W. Maxwell, formerly one of the Morrison girls of Pittsburgh, lost the pine needles tournament final on the twentieth hole to Helen Waring, of New York.

NEW YORK—(AP.)—Marion Hollins, who once held the national women's golf championship, is going in for horse racing. From California, where she is spending the winter, Miss Hollins has applied to the Jockey Club (New York) for registration of colors for life. She applied for and received "turquoise blue, ruby cap."

BIG PINE RECREATION CAMP, Cal.—(AP.)—Swooping down a 700-foot runway, Alf Engen, Salt Lake City, and Lars Haugen, Lake Tahoe, Cal., dedicated a new ski jump, the longest and highest in the world, with world record jumps of 231 feet.

NEW ORLEANS — (AP.) — The New Orleans Handicap, richest stake of the American winter turf, attracted fleet thoroughbreds and society folk for its running today at the Fair Grounds course.

OAKLAND, Cal.—(AP.) — Young Jack Thompson, former welterweight champion, will make his first fight appearance since he lost his title to Jimmy Freeman nearly six months ago, when he meets Babe Anderson, of San Jose, in a 10-round bout at Oakland Auditorium, February 11.

CHICAGO — (AP.) — Minnesota and Chicago will break the semester lull in the Big Ten basketball championship race tonight by meeting at Minneapolis for the right to share second place with Indiana's idle team.

CHICAGO—(AP.)—Robert Harper, of Denver, national amateur three-cushion billiard champion, was 16 points up on his challenger, Dr. Andrew Harris, of Chicago, with only one of the three 50-point blocks left to play today. Harris came back yesterday to capture the second block, 50 to 48, in 86 innings.

ORMOND BEACH, Fla.—R. W. Moorehead, of Pittsburgh, and his partner, L. Wilson, of Orlando, were defeated in the semi-final round of the local doubles tennis tourney here yesterday, losing to Ted Williams and C. L. Verner, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Indications are that the Central League will not operate this summer. Local business men have turned down a proposition to back a club, leaving only four teams in the circuit.

BRIDGEVILLE, CLAN DOUGLAS SET FOR REPLAY

Ellwood City Passers Out to Tie County League Leaders Tonight

WEST PENN CUP SEMI-FINAL CARDED TODAY

By TOM BIRKS.

All soccer roads lead to Garfield Park this afternoon, where Bridgeville and Clan Douglas resume hostilities in the semi-final round of the West Penn cup series.

These teams met on a muddy field last Saturday and battled to a tie, but Garfield Park is expected to be in far better shape this week. The game will be called at 2:30.

This will be the only game of the day. Two spacious stands will give the crowd ample opportunity to watch the fight.

Tomorrow's Gallatin - Elizabeth Mon-Yough League game has been called off. Gallatin will meet Shannon Fintex in a charity tilt for Frank Benick.

This is one of the most deserving cases in soccer. Benick received a broken leg in the National amateur cup game at Detroit last season, and has not worked since. The game will be played at Shannon and Corns will referee. It will be called at 3 p. m.

MOUNTAINEERS, BOBCATS MEET

By JESS CARVER.

A curtailed college basketball program confronts tri-state district varsities for tonight. The card is topped by the second meeting between West Virginia and West Virginia Wesleyan at Buckhannon.

Three weeks ago, the Bobcats appeared at Morgantown and carried off a decisive victory over the Mountaineers. Since then West Virginia has presented an improved quintet and expects to do a better job of holding off Cliff Battles and his mates tonight.

Slippery Rock winds up its swing through the eastern section of the state by playing West Chester State Teachers at West Chester. Penn State, still seeking a victory after half a dozen setbacks, tackles a strong Colgate five at State College.

Thiel opposes John Carroll in Cleveland, and Allegheny meets the Erie De Molay team in a charity benefit game in Erie.

Representatives of 10 outstanding Eastern colleges and universities gathered this morning in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Philadelphia to discuss the feasibility of a new basketball league. Included in the group are Pitt, Carnegie Tech and West Virginia, of this section. W. Don Harrison, of Pitt, and Max Hannum, of Carnegie, left for the Quaker City last night.

The proposed organization is sponsored by Earl Yeomans, graduate manager of athletics at Temple University.

Other schools with representatives in attendance include Penn State, Georgetown, New York University, Colgate, Syracuse and Fordham.

BARBERING PAYS DUKES' WAY

Clipping the curly locks of other students helps to pay the way of these Duquesne University "barbers" through college. Kwiatkowski was a freshman quarterback last fall and Isabella is a student manager of the gridders. Ammon is a varsity guard and Venneri a varsity tackle. Maron Antoon, husky freshman guard, who came all of the way from Louisiana to play for the Dukes, is another of the barbering gentry at the Bluff school. Note the recipients of tonsorial ministrations grinding away at their books while they are being shorn.

THIEL DOWNS CANISIUS

GREENVILLE, Pa., Jan. 31.—Thiel College had little trouble defeating Canisius College, of Buffalo, 28-20, here last night. The Lutherans led at half-time, 13-9, and trailed only once at 15-14 early in the second half. The lineup:

Thiel—28		Canisius—20
Wardle	F	Lipinski
Clark	F	Guarnieri
Frampton	C	Dicker
Bell	G	Mack
McCoy	G	Barton

Substitutions — Thiel: Petrini, Krauss, Barber, Harter. Canisius: Lynch, Wheatzle. Field goals—Wardle 4, Frampton 4, Bell 2, McCoy, Lipinski 2, Mack, Barton 2, Guarnieri 2, Lynch. Fouls—Thiel, 8 out of 12; Canisius, 4 out of 18. Referee—Pierotti.

Bob Gardner May Be Tennis Champ

The former golf star, paired with Howard Linn, of Chicago, advanced to the final of the national championship racquet doubles yesterday by defeating A. L. Corey and Palmer Dixon, New York, 12-15, 18-17, 15-5 and 15-9, in a hard overtime match. They meet Clarence Pell and Stanley Mortimer, of New York, for the title today.

Sport Vignettes

Last Sunday this column contained the names of a number of old-time local and district boxers who are being invited to attend the benefit boxing show for Father Cox's breadline relief fund . . . Come now to mind many additional names . . . They include those of Babe Connors, Mike Harding, Jimmy Irk, Ownie McManus, Terry McManus, Wee McMackin, Tony Capone, Jimmy (Red) Gallagher, Bud Brown, Sam Martin, Abe Modell, Sharkey Levine, Tommy Levine, Jimmy McCoy, Joe Getz, Barney McGuire, Monk Henny, Steve and Dick Conlon, Buzzy Carr, Mike Milko, Billy Bishop, Gus Camp, Cocky Dilla, Phil Scello, Joe and Freddie Lux, Hooks Evans, Swats Adamson, Young Leff, Jackie Lightning, Hugh and Frankie Madole, K. O. Sweeney, George Hauser, Jack Dufalla, Frank Moran (who is heading East as the manager of Les Kennedy, conqueror of Max Baer), Eddie and Bud Sentry, Tony Ross, of Carnegie; Red Cumpston, Jack and George McFarland, Art and Jim Rooney, Charley Schons, George Hook, Colianni, the amateur; Ernest Valentine, Frank Carroll, John Ubrey (his brother, Frank, also a boxer, was killed in the World War), Jack Tait, Jimmy Heston and Soldier Mack.

Many of these were amateur stars and their names are contributed by a fan who writes that mention of the parade of vets in the Sun-Telegraph not only revived memories, but actually gave him anew old thrills and made him feel young again. . . . Will he be at Father Cox's show? . . . He wouldn't miss it under any circumstances.

A letter from Louden Campbell, one of the real stars among the veterans, says he will be there with bells on to help make the affair an outstanding success, and he hopes all of the others mentioned will do likewise.—HARRY KECK.

POLO LEAGUE TILT ON TAP

The second match of the Pittsburgh Polo League's season will be staged tonight, the Vangs and Shady Side Academy riders jousting in the Hunt Armory. Last week the two army outfits, the 107th Artillery and the 308th Cavalry inaugurated league play with the Cavalry trio winning.

George Vang.

Speed and class has been added to the possibilities of the league by the purchase of new pony stock, two ponies from the International string brought to this country by the British polo team for the matches with the United States four at Meadowbrook last August have been secured by the Vangs. These mounts, Black Prince and Jack Frost will see action tonight.

Besides these International mounts, two ponies bred and trained by the Baltimore Polo Association have been purchased and will be ridden tonight.

The Shady Side team will be led by Dave McCahill, Jr. The Vang lineup will be selected from E. V. Babcock, Jr., former Princeton player; George Vang, president of the Vang Construction Company; Randolph Milholland, Cumberland horseman; W. C. Kline, James Gordon, former Wyoming cowboy rider, and C. L. Groder and John Herron, the latter a former U. S. Cavalry player.

The contest will get underway at 8:45 o'clock. Capt. E. J. Voltz will referee.

P. A. A. Fencing Tourney Tonight

The second annual one-day fencing tournament staged by the P. A. A. will be held tonight in the Athletic Association's club rooms.

Teams from Cleveland and Mansfield, O., as well as local squads, will compete in the event. The Cleveland College of Chiropody, Case School of Applied Science; the Mansfield Fencing Club; Greensburg Y. M. C. A.; the P. A. A. and the Y. M. H. A. all have entered teams.

JACKETS PLAY CLEVELAND

ly with the only other foemen who have yet to feel their sting.

Cleveland gained a 2-2 tie on the occasion of the Indians' debut here. The Jackets dropped two decisions in Cleveland, one in an overtime joust, since that time.

Crowds attending recent games at the Garden have been of the capacity variety. Most of the tickets for tonight's game were sold early in the week. Standing room is certain to be at a premium, and it will not be surprising if hundreds of fans are turned away at the gates. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		Cleveland
Cox	G	Woods
Fraser	D	McFarlane
Berlett	D	Frew
Ouelette	C	Gray
McCurry	W	Clark
Gregg	W	Dorati

STARS BLANKED

LONDON, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—London blanked Syracuse, 3 to 0, in an International Hockey League game here last night, and as a result, the Tecumsehs tightened their hold on third position and are now two points behind Windsor for possession of second position.

CLAPPER ENGAGED

BOSTON, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Aubrey (Dit) Clapper, right wing of the Boston Bruins hockey club, has disclosed he was engaged to Lorraine Pratt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Pratt, of Vancouver, B. C.

ROSE DISPENSES BAD BEATING TO KELLY

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Billy Rose, of Cincinnati, a smart, fast-moving, two-handed boxer and puncher, who knows how to fight a southpaw, last night "took" Jimmy Kelly, the dynamiter, of the North Side, like nobody's business in the 10-round main bout of the weekly show in the Moose Temple, downtown, before a fair-sized crowd.

It was a one-sided battle featured mainly by Rose's intelligent maneuvering and incessant punching and Kelly's great display of gameness and stamina in the face of a relentless and withering attack. There were no knockdowns, something unusual for a Kelly bout, but the battle, while a walkaway for Rose, was interesting to the end because of the ever-present threat of a paralyzing punch from Kelly's famous left hook.

Kelly won only one round, the fifth, in which he rallied from a bad beating in the four preceding sessions and kept carrying the fight to his opponent. He shook up Rose twice and kept the latter back-pedaling. Toward the end of the bout, Rose tired perceptibly from his own busy efforts and slowed down and Kelly made the going close with a lot of inside mixing during the last two rounds.

All of the other seven rounds went to Rose by wide margins. He kept his left hand always in Kelly's face and crossed his right or brought it up in uppercuts. He scaled 145 pounds against 143½ for Kelly.

WARNER STOPS DRAGON

The other scheduled 10-round bout, between Johnny Warner, of Clairton, 123, and Joey Dragon, of Cincinnati, 124, ended after 1 minute, 57 seconds of the eighth round, when Dragon's seconds tossed in the towel as he was being counted out from a left to the body after having been down for counts of nine from a right to the body in the sixth round and a left to the same spot in the seventh. Dragon, who was substituting on short notice for Mose Butch, was outclassed and didn't win a round, although he previously had given Warner a closer run over the same route at McKeesport. Last night's battle was tame until Warner dropped his boxing to turn in and slug in the fifth round.

Angelo Vergione, of Swissvale, 131¾, bested Tiger Ray Caldwell, Negro, of Cincinnati, 129, in the second bout of six rounds, but it was called a draw when the judges disagreed. Frank Brown voted for Vergione and Jock Simco for a draw, with Referee Red Robinson also voting for a dead heat. Caldwell outfought Vergione in the last two rounds, but started his rally too late, for Vergione had piled up a big lead in the first four.

BOXER'S JAW BROKEN

Marty Gornick, of McKeesport, handed out a bad beating to Bob Clanshaw, Negro, of the Hill, 144½, in the six-round opener, with the result that the latter had to be taken to the Passavant Hospital after the bout for treatment for a broken jaw. He also lost several teeth and was badly cut and battered. The towel should have been thrown in for him during the early rounds when it was apparent he was hopelessly outclassed.

Tommy Grant and A. C. Couch were the timers, Ray Eberle did the announcing and Dr. M. R. Goldman was the commission physician at the ringside.

Between Rounds

Jocko Walters, who knocked out Al Becker in the first round at the Moose Temple last week, will meet either Marcus Nole or Jack Tracy in the semi-final to the Buck McTiernan-Frankie Palmo bout at the Moose next Friday night.

Eddie Anderson arrived in town yesterday in time to work out in the afternoon in the Garden gym for his 10-round windup in the East End arena with Eddie Brannon, Monday night. He was accompanied by his bride of a week, whom he married in the ring before a bout in Omaha a week ago.

Frank Novak, North Side heavyweight, and his manager, Cy Seibert, wagered their entire end for Frank's bout with Benny Touchstone at McKeesport Thursday night, and after Novak lost by a technical knockout in the fourth round, the pair had to borrow carfare to return home, believe it or not.

Fred Broad, of New Kensington, will head a party of oldtime fight fans from that district who will attend the benefit show for Father Cox's relief fund in the Moose Temple next Wednesday night. Broad starred as a boxer years ago and later was successful as a promoter.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN,
The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

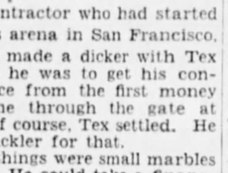
CHAPTER XVIII.

Tex Rickard didn't dally in California. He had to move. He knew that. Gillett, suddenly waxing bossy, said he'd call out the state militia if any further attempt was made to put on the bout. No use crying over spilled milk. Tex never did that. He wouldn't waste five minutes with a dead one and San Francisco as a fighting ground was out of the question now that Gillett had changed his mind so suddenly.

The arena was half built. Tex already had spent $35,000 on it, but, with never a second look at the uncompleted pine stadium, Tex moved his office to Reno, and that was in his hat.

Those who had come to San Francisco to see the bout had to follow Tex or else.

Wilson Mizner, Broadway's famous wag, had come all the way from New York to take in the bout. He was walking into the barber shop when he heard the news of up stakes.



Jim Jeffries.

"What can I do for you, Mr. Mizner," said his favorite barber, as Mizner stretched out in the chair.

"Just cut my throat," mumbled Mizner.

RENO ARENA UNDER WAY

There was a wild scramble to get quarters in Reno. It was no such place as San Francisco when it came to accommodations.

Rickard didn't try to salvage a nail or a plank out of the arena that was to be in San Francisco.

Once in Reno, Tex gave orders for new lumber. He would take the other one on the chin for a $35,000 loss.

The fighters grumbled, but had to follow. Jeffries was comfortably quartered at Rohardenan, a little summer resort 85 miles from San Francisco in the Santa Cruz mountains. Jeff had Jim Corbett, Joe Choynski and many other noted boxers in his camp ready to help in the great task of getting Jim into shape.

Before starting on the hardest training campaign any fighter ever endured, Jeffries had made a tour of Europe and this country. Sam Berger was in charge of this venture and boxed with Jeffries. He was cut in on the profits and Jeffries made $150,000.

JEFF'S ARM TROUBLE

When Jeffries arrived in New York, prior to embarking on his theatrical tour, he weighed 312 pounds. He was plenty fat and how he ever got it off and entered the ring with a reasonably slim waist is one of the mysteries of the ring. Jeff never was afraid of work when he was in training and he worked off the fat through sheer grinding.

Jeff had noticed that the sinews of both arms had contracted so much on the inner side of his elbows that his arms were crooked in a peculiar position when hanging normally. This worried him. He knew what had caused it, or thought he did.

Earlier in his career, when he was young, big and husky, he had played a hard game of baseball with his camp staff, and, becoming weary and perspiring freely, he had thrown himself down in the grass of an open field. He fell sound asleep and, when he awoke, his arms were numb and stiff. Ever after that those cords in his elbows gave him trouble. With his retirement and the absence of training, they had stiffened greatly. Jeff knew one of the first things he would have to overcome, if possible, was that stiffness. No man with half-crooked arms was going to get anywhere with Jack Johnson, Jeff told himself.

AN ELECTRICAL TREATMENT

With the assurance that the bout would be promoted, Jeffries had rushed to New York to have those stiffened arms treated.

He sought out an old German professor who was noted for his electrical treatments of crippled limbs.

I happened to go along with Jeff the day he took the first treatment and I never saw a more spectacular display of an indoor electrical storm than came with Jim's first meeting with the old professor.

He commanded Jim to sit in a big glass chair that was resting on a long, low glass table. Jeffries had removed only his hat. The room looked like the testing room of the General Electric Company. I never saw so many wheels, buzzers and gadgets in all my life.

The professor doused the lights and then turned on the juice. Machinery was roaring like Niagara. Sparks began to shoot out from every corner of Jeffries.

As Jeff lifted his shoes from the table and stuck them out in front of him, great long blue flames of electricity shot from every nail in Jim's shoes. It was an alarming, uncanny sight. We couldn't see Jim's face, but we did see his hair, standing straight on end, a thread of blue electricity shooting from the end of every hair.

"Dree hundredt dousandt voldts," roared the professor in my ear.

"PLOT" BLOWS UP

I had it now! It was a plot to burn Jim Jeffries alive. Jack Johnson probably had bribed the professor to bump Jim off. All of these things were running through my mind when the professor suddenly switched off the juice and turned on the lights.

There sat Jeffries, perspiring, but laughing, none the worse for his weird experience.

Jeff asked about those 300,000 volts.

"Doesn't it take only 2,500 volts to kill a man in the electric chair?" asked Jeff.

"Dot iss so," said the professor, "but it iss not der voldts vott kills der man. Id iss der amperes. Doss is der knockoudt. Amperes iss der quantity, voldts only der speedt with vitch der amperes, der strength of the juice, goes through der man's body. Remember amperes iss quantity, voldts speedt. I vass sending only a few amperes through Mr. Cheffries, but at a speedt of dree hundredt tousandt voldts."

TEX'S LAST DREAM

The contractor who had started Rickard's arena in San Francisco, they say, made a dicker with Tex in which he was to get his contract price from the first money that came through the gate at Reno. Of course, Tex settled. He was a stickler for that.

These things were small marbles with Tex. He could take a financial belt on the chin better than any man I ever knew. In fact, about the only time I ever heard his roar was over the Tunney and Heeney failures. He knew he was being forced into paying Tunney about as much as he would draw. He didn't want the bout in the first place. It was shoved on him. He was in hopes that Heeney, by some streak of luck, would win and become the star of an international battle with Dempsey.

That London international was one of the Rickard dreams that never came true. Had he lived, perhaps, he would have had his wish, for I'm certain he would have angled the dream into a bout between Schmeling and Dempsey, on the other side. Too bad he didn't live to see it through. It would have made a corking story.

DAVIS CUP ENTRIES CLOSE

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Despite a few defections, the field for the Davis Cup competition this year promises closely to approach last year's total of 30. A few days ago 26 nations were known to have filed entries for the three zones, 19 in the European zone, two in the North American zone and five in the newly-created South American zone. Entries for the European and North American zones close today in Paris.

HALL BEATS LAYTON

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Allen Hall, of Chicago, handed Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., one of the worst defeats in his brilliant career last night, defeating the former champion, 50 to 29, in 32 innings for second place money in the world three-cushion championship tournament.

Fight Results

At Moose Temple—Billy Rose defeated Jimmy Kelly, 10 rounds; Johnny Warner won by technical knockout over Joey Dragon, 8 rounds; Angelo Vergione and Tiger Ray Caldwell drew (referee's decision), 6 rounds; Marty Gornick defeated Bob Clanshaw, 6 rounds.

At East Liverpool, O.—Teddy Yarosz defeated Mickey Fedor, 10 rounds; Bobby Belford and Jimmy Hicks drew, 6 rounds; Jimmy Massey defeated Steve Carroll, 4 rounds; Billy Fairweather knocked out Walter Weekley, 1 round; Harry Weekley knocked out (technical) Gebe Barrett, 3 rounds.

At Milwaukee—King Levinsky knocked out Harry Dillon, 2 rounds; Ray Kizer defeated Frankie Hughes, 8 rounds; Del Fortaine knocked out (technical) Al Settle, 4 rounds.

CHARLEROI FIVE HOPE TO HALT MANHATTANS

By JULIUS LEVIN.

The Ellwood City Manhattans, one of the features of the second half race in the Allegheny County League, will have a chance to tie the Duquesne Lafayettes for first place tonight when they invade Charleroi to engage the Merchants.

The Manhattans at present are one-half game behind the Scarlet Hurricane for the top position in the second half of the County League fight and a victory over Charleroi will enable them to deadlock the leaders with a record of five victories and one defeat.

PLAY GREAT GAME

The Manhattans and Lafayettes have been playing the best ball in the second round and likely will stage an interesting duel to the finish in an effort to earn the right to engage Fintex in the post-season playoffs. Fintex won the first half title.

Two games are offered the West Penn League followers. North Side Buicks playing at St. Michael's, while the Hoyles are the attraction of Community House.

In the Greater Pittsburgh League, De Sales is at Atlantic and Foresters at Pittsburghers, while in the Metropolitan League, Mt. Washington Triangles oppose Hill Top and Daro opposes Soho Community.

Wellsburg plays at Monessen in the lone Tri-County League battle, while at Homestead, Cleveland East meets that team in an Interstate Saxon League fray.

Three games will be played in the County Amateur League, Downtown being at Westinghouse, Kingsley House at Hill Top and Tarentum at Wilmerding.

St. Joseph's, first half winner in the Catholic Lyceum League, starts its second round fight against St. James.

P. A. A. IN OHIO

P. A. A. seeks it sixteenth straight victory against Cleveland West Side in Cleveland, while the I. K. S. plays at Homewood.

The Penn Five defeated North Side Community, 40 to 23, in the West Penn League last night, while I. K. S. was bumped by Homewood Presbyterian, 42-24, in the Wagner Institutional League. The Forresters won over the Pittsburghers, 38-20, in the Greater Pittsburgh, while Rankin beat Downtown Y., 31-29, in the Amateur League. The L. F. Burkes tripped Sharpsburg Panthers, 28-26, on the Junior loop.

The Butler Paulists were beaten by I. K. S. Varsity, 39-28, in the feature independent battle.

VANITIES COP

READING BUYS BRAVES

READING, Pa., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Purchase of Pitcher Kenneth Jones and Outfielder William Dunlap, from the Boston Club, of the National League, has been announced here by Pants Rowland, manager of the Reading Club, of the International League.

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Things which haven't been written:

Rod LaRoque telling a newspaperman come to interview him. "We don't want any."

Mr. Pfarr

The inebriated count who told a reporter Pittsburgh's liquor was bad but its girls good.

The Vice League's raid on the big gambling house in Baum boulevard a few years ago, when the reporters ate all the chicken and complained it was tough.

* * *

The master of ceremonies who, after reading a local movie critic's review of his debut, telegraphed: "What do you mean?"

The sobby piece (never printed) which Groucho Marx wrote for Sidewalks about the

* * *

Rosa Ponselle, here for a concert, insisting that an interviewer not smoke cigarets in her presence because the smoke bothered her precious throat.

Vin Sweeney, Dormont taxpayer, going in for loud clothes as soon as he was married.

Mark Shields' speeches, at the John Cowan testimonial dinner, in which he talked turkey to the attending politicians.

The late Common Pleas Judge who would sneak out of the courtroom while certain lawyers were talking too much to the jury.

The disgruntled newspaperman who went out for lunch and wired his boss: "From now on your paper is just a memory to me."

* * *

The anonymous phone call to Detective Jim McGinley which enabled the sleuths to arrest Paul Jaworski on the Weckoski farm in Washington County.

Young W. L. King, the disappointed vice crusader, fibbing about his age when he was hired.

The downtown lawyer bounced out of a Homestead cabaret on his ear, who jumped up and shouted, "Lend me an ear, my fellow. . . ."

* * *

A daughter of Col. Guffey stopping to answer a telephone ring while she was hurrying from the burning Guffey home.

Dolores Costello explaining it had been so long ago she couldn't remember where she had lived in Pittsburgh. She had lived in Soho.

Ethel Barrymore warning the William Penn Hotel staff that positively no newspaper persons were to bother her. None of them tried to.

The late Rody Marshall stealing the play from Attorney Charlie Prichard, who was too polite to interrupt, at a hearing before Squire Shields in Wilkinsburg.

The speakeasy proprietor who, quite unconsciously, used the alias, James M. Clark (public safety director), with his landlord and the gas company.

The man who sent postcards quoting the Scripture every day for years to the newspapers.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

FT. WORTH, Tex., Jan. 31.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

These people in the drought-stricken country ain't waiting for the government to relieve 'em. The well-to-do are helping the less fortunate themselves. At a matinee in Wichita Falls, we played to nine thousand one hundred. At Ft. Worth, the cowman's paradise, we played to eighteen thousand at night. At my breakfast matinee at Abilene at 10 o'clock, got sixty-five hundred, and every cent of that is net. People in America have got the money and will give if they know the need is there, and these people know it is.

Will Rogers

Say, we got a real show. Frank Hawkes is our monologist. National Broadcasting loaned me the "Revellers" the greatest singing quartet in America, Jimmy Rodgers, the Victor atist yodler, and Chester Byers, world's champion roper. But quit wiring for dates. We are all filled. Yours,

WILL.

Mme. Chanelle From Paris To Create Gowns for Movie Stars

By HARRISON CARROLL.

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.

The long arm of Hollywood has reached to Paris for one of the world's most famous fashion arbiters.

According to a wire received from Samuel Goldwyn, Mme. Chanelle, noted Parision designer, has been put under contract to create gowns for United Artists productions. Under the terms of the agreement she will spend six months each year in Paris and six in Hollywood.

The move is regarded as another step toward making Hollywood the style center of the world.

Mr. Goldwyn also has other interesting news. W. Somerset Maughan will come to the film colony to write a story for Ronald Colman. Michael Arlen also will make his second pilgrimage to Hollywood to aid in the production of his story, "What Fun Frenchmen Have." Despite rumors to the contrary, this still is set as Colman's next vehicle. Furthermore, it will be one of the first three pictures to go into production at United Artists upon Goldwyn's return.

Ronald Colman

The other will be "Street Scene," with the possibility of King Vidor as director, and "The Greeks Had a Word for It." Apparently, Norma Talmadge's failure to take this production on the road will now prevent her making it as a talkie. The star now is in Florida, but will return soon to start rehearsals.

HE OUGHT TO TRY CHAUCER

In "The Great Meadows," M. G. M. used dialogue as it was spoken in 1771.

After the first preview of the picture, a studio wit approached Eleanor Boardman.

"By the way," he said, "when are you going to make the English version?"

LATEST GOSSIP

Rear Admiral Byrd was elated to discover that he is taller than John Barrymore. They stood back-to-back and measured. . . B. P. Shulberg, Paramount executive, rivals Ernest Lubitsch in the consumption of cigars. He even smokes them between the acts at the theater. . . . According to rumors, Constance Bennett and her agents are at odds over the commission on her $300,000 two-picture contract with Warner Brothers. The agents 10 per cent would amount to a cool $30,000. . . . . Mae Murray's third oil well came in this week at Venice. . . . . Johnnie Hines, of all people, has been writing a book for the last eight months. . . . . Bert Wheeler gets back Saturday night from New York. . . . . John Barrymore is ill with a recurrence of the jungle fever he contracted in Guatemala. . . . . Joan Marsh, one of Hollywood's comeliest blondes, will play the ingenue lead in Bill Haines' new picture. . . . . Loretta Young will have to postpone her trip to Chicago to be with her husband, Grant Withers, during his recuperation from an appendicitis operation. She is in the midst of a picture and cannot be spared.

Westinghouse Gets Power Plant Order

A contract totaling $250,000 for the delivery and erection of a complete switch gear equipment has been awarded the Westinghouse Electric Company by the New Kanawha Power Company, a subsidiary of the Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation.

The equipment includes an 8-panel switchboard, a 10-panel station auxiliary board and 69 Kv. high tension oil breakers and switching equipment for the control of the four 30,000 Kv.-a Westinghouse waterwheel generators.

Perry High School Gives 50 Diplomas

Fifty seniors in Perry High School received diplomas at commencement exercises in the school auditorium last night. Speakers were the Rev. John E. Simpson, pastor of the North United Presbyterian Church; Martha Gibson, Mary Bruner, Marion Locke and Herrymon Maurer.

Honor Islam Grotto Monarch Tonight

A testimonial dinner to William G. Doench, retiring monarch of Islam Grotto, will be held in McCreery's dining room tonight. About 1,500 members are expected to attend. Judge Samuel H. Gardner will be the principal speaker, and City Councilman Harry A. Little toastmaster.

Carnegie Increases Operating Schedule

SHARON, Pa., Jan. 31.—Carnegie Steel Company will operate the blooming mill on three eight-hour turns instead of two 10-hour shifts, starting Monday, officials announce. This increase will feature the week's operating schedule in Shenango Valley mills.

Motorist Charged With Manslaughter

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Jan. 31.—At a hearing and inquest into the death of John Morar, 58, killed by an automobile, January 17, Timothy Lewis, 21, alleged driver of the car, was held for court on a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

CENSOR IS THE VILLIAN IN GREAT PICTURE AT THE PENN

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

George Seibel

Note these three names — Ruth Chatterton, Zoe Akins and Susan Glaspell—for together they have produced a fine picture, art that is true to life. You should see this picture to realize what good things they can do in the talkies—and what stupid things the censor can do. For there is a vallain in this piece—the Censor who obliterates much of the dialogue.

It is the story of a girl whose father assists the mother of her lover in keeping them apart. When the lover is killed by accident, the girl is driven to marry another man and move to Colorado to "hide her shame."

PLAYS DUAL ROLE

Eighteen years later the child of that first love affair has grown up, and a similar crisis comes in her life. Ruth Chatterton now plays both mother and daughter, by ingenious camera work that will keep the audience guessing how it's done. The mother advises her daughter what to do, but the daughter runs off to China to become a missionary.

Love comes to her in China, and this time she follows her mother's counsels.

It is a powerful story, truthfully told and sincerely played. Besides Paul Lukas and David Manners there's a Pittsburgher in the cast—Irving Pichel—who does a strong and sympathetic bit of acting.

PRODIGY WIELDS BATON

In place of David Pesetzki a child prodigy wields the baton for the overture of Massenet's "Phedre." Robert Conche, 16 years old, is a discovery of Louis K. Sidney. With his bobbed hair he looks like a girl, but he labors like a giant. As violin soloist he also was well received.

Chester Fredericks — dancing, tumbling, jesting — assists Ted Claire in his farewell week. And a real hit was made by the juggler Stan Kavanaugh, who nonchalantly keeps balls and Indian clubs gyrating around him while the audience laughs at their vain efforts to escape.

Edith Griffith sings pleasingly and there is graceful adagio dancing by Emilie and Romaine. Dick Leibert wears a gas-mask as he plays "Something to Remember You By"—but why should he fear a barrage of eggs? He's not the censor that insulted the audience.

Vaudeville

CHANGES IN BILLS TODAY AND MONDAY

Larry Rich and his six mad Pests share headline honors in the Davis with Nan Halperin, singing comedienne, beginning today. The screen offering is "Other Men's Women," featuring Grant Withers and Mary Astor.

"Fair Warning," screen drama of the old West, featuring George O'Brien, opens at the Harris today. Five acts of vaudeville will be seen on the stage.

C. J. McPhillips, company electrician of "Subway Express," scheduled for presentation at the Nixon, beginning Monday, earns his salary. He sits at a switchboard during the entire performance manipulating switches and lights that give the subway car its appearance of a moving vehicle.

Alyce Morley, featured comedienne in George White's "Flying High," opening in the Alvin for a one-week engagement beginning Monday evening, has written a humorous article for a woman's magazine bearing the title "220 Pounds and What of Them."

The part of Mrs. Crane in "Ladies of the Jury," originated by Mrs. Fiske, will be played by Mabel Kroman in George Sharp's presentation of the play in the Pitt next week.

'SURPRISE PACKAGE' IS POWELL'S SHOW

Dick Powell, who has been doing the master of ceremony act in Pittsburgh so long that he seems like one of our town's natives, is presenting "Surprise Package" in the Enright. As usual Mr. Powell's happy smile and crooning voice have the audiences clapping for more. He is a popular fellow.

Entertainers in the stage revue include Joe May and Dottie Smith and Rogers and Joe and Willie Hall. The dancing chorus and Dorothy Bushey and Madelyn Ward also are on the bill.

The film feature is "Other Men's Women." It is the story of a fellow who loves his friend's wife and much of its action is laid against a background of steel rails and thundering locomotives. Grant Withers and Mary Astor are featured. Regis Toomey, who used to live out in the East End, is in the cast.

Police Leave Sunday For New York School

Five members of the Pittsburgh Police Department will go to New York tomorrow to attend the police school to obtain pointers of handling Pittsburgh's increasing traffic problem. The group will include Assistant Superintendent Benjamin R. Marshall, Jacob F. Dorsey, traffic inspector; Lieut. Albert F. Jacks, Motorcycle Patrolman Albertus Keller and Mounted Patrolman Charles L. Dye.

Legion Commander To Be Guest Here

Ralph T. O'Neil, of Topeka, Kan., national commander of the American Legion, will be in Pittsburgh Tuesday as guest of honor at the tenth annual national commander's banquet in the William Penn Hotel. Speakers will be John B. Nicklas, Jr., Allegheny County commander; George J. Proesl, of Dubois, and Charles L. Engard, of Philadelphia. Edward Crump, Jr., past commander of Allegheny County, will preside.

Agents Seize Still In Farmhouse Raid

Prohibition agents yesterday raided a farmhouse in Forward Township, and confiscated a 300-gallon still which, they said, was not in operation. Gulven Fernandez, 67, was released on his own recognizance.

Throat Cut, Woman Declared Suicide

Her throat slashed with a razor, Mrs. Maggie Veselich, 34, of 4859 Hatfield street, was found dead on the floor at her home yesterday. A verdict of suicide was given by the coroner. Ill health is thought to have been the cause, police say.

Exit

I fear that you are apt to find me tired,
Wearied in ways I cannot long conceal;
Effortless, too, and dully uninspired,
And, probably, to your surprise, unreal.
It is the woman's privilege to feel
Such things as these, such cruel qualms and fears,
And placidly and thoroughly to steel
Herself against the faintest trace of tears.

If memories assail you, be as grim
As I propose to be, and understand
That he should be to her as she to him,
And feel this final pressure of her hand.
And if you cannot fathom what I say, dear,
Let me be briefer still: Be on your way, dear.

—Roberta B.

Haw!

George Mayo, who succeeded Lou Holtz in the touring "Manhattan Mary" show, reports that Sam, the Delicatessen man, of Cleveland, is that city's funniest dialectician. Not that Sam is intentionally comical, you understand—he is merely the type who says things that slay you.

Mayo, for example, dined at the kosher place one sundown. He ordered tea to complete his meal.

"So how to you want it," queried Sam, "in a gless hor wit' lemon?"

"What kind of English do you call that?" kidded Mayo, "in a glass or wit' lemon?"

"Stop making fun!" snapped Sam, "som pipple like tea in a cup hor wit' crimm!!!"

In Fewer Words

And Fred ("Three's a Crowd") Allen reports that the depression is so bad in the concert field—soloists are singing duets!

Description

At the Paramount party for Maurice Chevalier the other day, Kelcy Allen introduced Robert Garland to some femme as "the well-known drama critic."

"What," asked the Young Person, "is a dramatic critic?"

Heheheh

Then there's the silly about the German comedians who were pediculous with a capital "L." They were famous for the amount of times their act was canned after the opening matinee on tour. In one month they were canceled five times. One of them wired the booking agent:

"Canned again. Where do we go from here?" To which the agent replied: "To hell!"

"Okay," they telegraphed, "send tickets."

The Gallant James

The other performance one of the hats flew into the audience and struck a woman. Jimmy felt terrible about it. But the asbestos had fallen on the first act and the comedian went to his dressing room and pouted.

An idea struck him. He sent a friend out to purchase a five-pound box of candy. When the curtain lifted on the second act, Jimmy leaped from the stage to hand the gift to the lady, and he solemnly told her how sorry he was for the accident.

The audience responded in roof-lifting fashion, cheering the actor for fully half a minute for his gesture.

O, Mr. Wilstach!

Suggested for F. J. Wilstach's Dictionary of Similes: Sydney C. Williams: He treated a book like an osteopath. . . Anon's: She was about as individual as a postage stamp . . . George Moore's: Run for their lives like cats from pavement skaters, and Dana L. Cotie's: As deceiving as a dentist's smile.

Good Old Gangdom

One of the physicians to the local banditti was saying that a good many of his gangster patients are not victims of gun duels over rackets or "Big Business." Often, he said, he has to treat a gangster who is shot by one of his own crowd over a trifle.

One night recently, for instance, a gorilla called on another toughie at his home and they started a drinking bout.

"What's the idea of having gold fishes here?" he said as he lifted the bowl and emptied it out of the window in the clown manner.

"Only a rat like you would do such a thing to those poor little things!" cried the other as he shot his pal four times.

As If You Didn't Know

The modern girl's idea of using a needle, observes a wag, is to change it after every record.

The Retort Proper

Hy Heath was reminiscing about the late Frank Bacon and his long struggle for success. On the opening night of "Lightnin'" in the Gaiety Theater here the house was jammed to the doors. When 9 p. m. arrived and the asbestos had not lifted, John Golden, the producer, hastened back stage into Bacon's dressing room.

"Good heavens, man!" growled Golden, "do you realize you have kept a Broadway audience waiting for 30 minutes?"

PICTURE IN ALDINE IS 'PASSION FLOWER'

"Passion Flower," adapted from the novel by Kathleen Norris, opened yesterday in the Aldine and earned some commendation. While not a picture of a superior order likely to place in the upper ten, it was so well done by a uniformly capable cast and moved so smoothly that it left a sense of satisfaction.

It treated in a new manner the old plot of a girl surrendering wealth and ease for the cares of a marriage with the family chauffeur. The girl's cousin, unhappily married to wealth, is the central figure in the story. She makes and mars the marriage, giving life to the title of the picture, and bringing about the happy ending.

Kay Johnson, the bride; Charles Bickford, her chauffeur husband, and Kay Francis, the siren, carry the burden of the story in capable fashion. The comedy of Zazu Pitts, the domestic, is a bright relief. A precocious youngster deserves particular mention. Lewis Stone does well his small part.

Hearst Metrotone News depicts a variety of interesting events, especially in comments by leading national figures on the Wickersham commission report. The bill is completed by a Holmes Travel-talk, "Modern Madrid;" a Chase comedy, "Fast and Loose," and a cartoon, "Dizzy Dishes."

MR. LOWE PLAYS GOLF AND SAVES DOG IN STANLEY

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Part Time Wife" is the new picture in the Stanley. It aims to be smart romantic comedy. It is just Edmund Lowe and Leila Hyams acting like a couple of kids.

Mr. Lowe is a golf widower and Miss Hyams is the little wife who goes gadding to the golf clubs. She comes home late for dinner. He gets "mad." He spills soup on his tie. And he gets "madder" still. So they separate.

Then the golf bug bites him. He goes in for a tight pair of knickers, which rip in the regular two-reel movie manner. He meets his wife on the links. They have a game together and then go automobile riding.

SAVED FROM THE POUND

In an effort to bolster up this trivial story, a Sonny Boy complex and the Animal Rescue League are called in. A little orphaned caddy, played by Tommy Clifford, is befriended by Mr. Lowe. And, in the nick of time, the boy's little dog is saved from a pauper's death in the city pound.

Mr. Lowe manages his part with a delicious humorous quality. And the film does have some moments. An episode that involves a motorcycle policeman is clever—but suggestive. The chief trouble lies in mixing a Sonny Boy and his innocent little dog with the sophisticated stuff.

ON THE STAGE

"Fountains of Melody" is Ed Lowry's stage show. Brems, Fitz and the Murphy Brothers make a goofy quartet that harmonizes voices and slapstick comedy. You'll laugh at them. The remainder of the revue isn't so much. Mr. Lowry and Bernie Armstrong have a session with some old jokes and the little green piano. The Allan Foster Girls appear in what comes under the head of dancing. There are other entertainers.

SNAKE IN SAND FOILED BY HERO IN FULTON AND SHERIDAN

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Mr. Bill Boyd gallops along on a white horse and wins the girl in "The Painted Desert," which came to both the Fulton and the Sheridan Square screens yesterday. Early sequences of the film are about as slow as a week-end on an Ohio farm. But eventually it does pick up some melodramatic momentum.

Cattle stampede, a 20-mule team runs wild and a mine blows up.

Mr. Boyd starts out in the picture as a little baby. But he soon grows up into a combination good-will missionary and hero. He preaches the creed of friendship to two old estranged westerners. And he looks a villain in the eye so hard that this snake in the sand confesses right off to all the dirty work he has been doing.

The heroics are all in the theatrical manner of the movie West. And the villainy is a bit far-fetched. Just how a fellow expects to win a girl by blowing up a mine and frightening mule teams isn't so clear.

Two oldtimers of the screen, William Farnum and J. Farrell MacDonald, are prominent in the cast. Mr. Farnum's eyes are as bright and his shock of hair as heavy as ever. But he is so dramatic. He can't take a drink without making it into a climax, anti-climax or something.

Helen Twelvetrees is the girl. And how does she do? you ask. Well, what can an actress do with such a part as is hers?

The Fulton bill includes a short comedy with Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. It is a howl.

By SALLY MARTIN

"Just David" thought they were—and then some! They're the bunk!" he snorted, after two of 'em had failed to appreciate him. "They're just plain poison and any guy with brains will keep away from them!"

Do you think that men like an Old Fashioned Girl—a generous, loyal femme who'll stick by them, good times or bad? That's what Jenine thought! And acted accordingly. And see what her boy friend did!

"Dear Sally —

"For a long time I have been a reader of your column, but have never taken part in the battles that have been waged in it. However, 'Just David's' letter was too much for me, so here goes:

Fell in Love

"Listen, little abused David—step out of your narrow-minded path long enough to listen to a Girl's experience with selfish, self-centered men. Oh, yes, there are men like that.

"I didn't know that when I first started going out. I thought men appreciated a girl who was thoughtful and considerate—who didn't 'cheat on a steady'—who was sympathetic and understanding and who didn't expect a fellow with only a little money to take her out every night in the week. That's what I was fool enough to believe because fellows were always moaning for that kind of a girl.

"However, as I began to go out with them more and more, and had a chance to study and really know them and watch them, I began to feel more and more doubtful. Each new experience increased my doubts.

Then, I fell in love. Yes, Cynical. In love. And there's where you're wrong again! Love is far from being a laughing matter, much less a joke!

Stood by Him

"Well, everything went lovely—for a while. We were 'going steady' and expected to announce our engagement in November. All this time my boy friend was out of work. I did the best I could in helping him hunt a job. I tried to cheer him up when he got discouraged. I didn't complain because he could take me out any place very seldom. I stood by him through it all.

"Then, when he did get a job, I noticed a change in him. He didn't come to see me as often as he had, and he didn't stay very long when he did. Finally, I discovered that he was dating another girl! A girl who had thrown him down when he had no money to spend on her!

When I asked him about it, point blank, he admitted the truth, and said that he was tired of me and my high ideals. He told me that I was too 'old-fashioned' and that I ought to snap out of it. I can't get his point of view on that because I smoke, take an occasional drink, am full of pep, and am rated a good dancer. And he says himself that he prefers a girl with a clean mind. So what in thunderation does he mean by 'old-fashioned?'"

"Well, the point is, that after doing everything I could to be regular and stand by him, I was left flat for a girl who keeps him spending his money as fast as he makes it!

"So you see, Sonny Boy, you aren't the only one who got handed a broken heart. And men can hand out just as many dirty deals as women, so come off your high horse!

"This doesn't mean that I'm trying to paint a halo on myself or any other girl. I have so many faults that it would take a lot of room to put them down, but what I'm trying to get at is that girls are no worse than boys.

"So cheer up! You'll find a girl to your liking some day, if you'll get next to yourself and stop being so cynical. I know a lot of them right here in this very city who are peaches, and if you'll just look around, you'll be able to find them, too. But get over your grouch first, or they won't take to you when you do meet them! You shouldn't hate people because some are the bunk anyway. That's silly."

"JENINE."

Humans Assorted

Well, honey, that certainly was a rough deal. And you're a brave girl to have found wisdom where others would have found only pain. For, of course, you're right—

All women aren't heartless because a couple were giddy gold-diggers—

We must take humans as they come. And they come assorted. There's no such thing as man nature—or woman nature. There's only human nature, and that's never the same thing twice.

But you can bet on this—

Most of us are a decent lot—and decency always wins out, in the long run.

So keep on being fine, little Jenine. Be fine for your own sake—because fineness is beautiful. And some day, some real man will come along who will appreciate you. And I'll say, he'll be lucky!

"Love's Labour Lost"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Brave Johnny loved bonny Jean. He doted upon the bright hairs in her ship-shape little golden head—thought her perfect, even thought her wise. He liked ONLY turned-up noses since he had first cast his astonished eyes upon hers. He was prostrate before the enemy without her lifting her small pinky fingers.

But NOW he sings a song that goes on about something like, "Fair, but more fickle than fair!"; something about woman being "mild as a dove, but not so trusty!" A bitter, worldly ole song, from an embittered heart.

Because one day John dared all: took his heart in his hand, and offered it to Jean to use forever if she would: a brave heart between her and the world when the world scared her. "Why," said Jean and lanky John, "I even wish you would get terrible sick for months and not have any money so I could take all my savings and my salary as fast as I could grab it to make you well again."

But Jean dilly-dallied—didn't wrap soft arms around his neck and say, "Oh, ye-e-e-s!" Instead, she showed him a picture of some Ben-Hurish hero whose head was smaller than his hand, like an afterthought in the making of this magnifique frame, if Jean had thought to notice then and not later. And she pouted adorably and wished delicately that John himself was a bit more like that—that he wasn't quite so lean and flat. She knew he was good and smart—but he didn't look like a "young god" in one single item. So good, brainy, thin John, thinking that THIS was the fly in the amber all the time, worked himself first half to death and then into an ad for a physical-culture school. And came back—to Dresden-doll Jean and the dear little brocaded love-seat, to show off and claim her "yes." A mighty figure of a man!

And there was little Jean, doting upon, adoring, a fellow who was just what John himself had been! Only thinner!

Johnny calls Jean fickle. But Jean only discovered, after John was gone up on his Labor of Love, that the head of the man in the picture was too small for his body. John was too hasty—n'est ce pas?

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Atmosphere You Can "Cut With a Knife"

It is strange how many persons have no interest in the sort of air they breathe. They appear perfectly indifferent to an atmosphere that you could "cut with a knife." They will sit for hours in a room blue with tobacco smoke, or in air filled with dust.

Dr. Copeland

There are persons who sleep all night long with every window closed. There are lots of them. They seem not to know or care that the air is perfectly vile.

All I can say is they are laying up trouble and misery for themselves and their families. Unless you are built like a savage, you cannot have good health without a lot of fresh air in the house day and night. You should make it a point to have some ventilation, whether it is by way of windows or doors or by some artificial means.

Of course, if you are so fortunate as to have a house installed with modern ventilation, you are to be congratulated. But few have adequate ventilating systems, so that the only means of having fresh air is by way of the window or door.

The man who is accustomed to a well-ventilated home will not tolerate his office or place of business to be choked all day long with stale air, dust or smoke. He will insist on having the windows open. To breathe over and over the irritating air for hours is to damage the delicate membranes of nose, throat and lungs. The eyes will suffer.

Many of the too prevalent colds of winter may be traced to vitiated air—air without life. Living in a room or house without proper ventilation is dangerous.

I beg of you not to permit yourself and your family to be housed in stuffy rooms. The ideal way to live is to have your home so well heated that you can have every room ventilated by having at least one slightly open window.

There is nothing in the world so good as fresh air for man, woman and child. Next to eating, it is the most important factor in insuring good health.

Dress yourself warmly enough so that you can enjoy the fresh air. Build up resistance to disease by getting out-of-doors and breathing the right kind of air indoors, every day, every night. For the sake of your health do this, and get proper exercise while you are doing it.

It isn't necessary to sit in a draught, and you shouldn't. There are shields and other devices to direct the currents of air to the ceiling. Give thought to the problem and you can work out some plan of your own to get fresh air without chill.

Answers to Health Queries

M. S. W. Q.—I have been troubled with an itchiness of the thighs, leaving the legs covered with black and blue marks as if they had been bruised. What would cause this trouble?

A.—These symptoms would seem to suggest purpura. See your doctor for a definite diagnosis and proper treatment.

* * *

SUE M. Q.—Would it be dangerous to use nitric acid on a mole?

A.—Such blemishes should have proper medical attention and treatment. It is most unwise to attempt treatment unless it has been specifically prescribed. See a skin specialist and he will advise the treatment you require.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Ponders the Acceptance of Veritzen's Kind Offer

The third act reprieve of the old melodrama held no greater sense of relief to the wide-eyed people watching it than came to me with the promise of Philip Veritzen that until after Mary's party he would not "play the part of an ogre, but that of a non-committal gentleman doing his best to be courteous."

For something even more disturbing to me than the troubles of Noel and Mary was tacitly postponed by that promise. Sooner or later I knew, I would have to deal with the personal note which Philip Veritzen had sounded ever since our first meeting, and which I had heard with alarming frequency in the last day or two and I was thankful indeed that I need not face it for several days to come.

My employer was a man of his word, even when it was not put into definite speech. He had just implied a promise, made it more emphatic by the expression in his eyes, and I knew that I could go on with my plans for Mary's party with nothing on my mind more troubling than my intense wish to make it a success.

But I was conscious that Mr. Veritzen was eyeing me intently and waiting for a reply to the question with which he had finished his promise. "Will that satisfy you?" he asked and with a feeling of real gratitude for the concessions he was making, I gave him a smiling "Perfectly, thank you. It is more——"

I stopped, confused, and my employer finished the sentence for me with a wry smile.

"Than you had expected," he said. "Well, I am glad, at least that I haven't disappointed you. And now suppose we 'return to our muttons,' even though they are very small lambs. I asked you a few minutes ago about your color scheme. Of course, you are attending to the general arrangements, but may I not have a small share in them? May I not send you cut flowers for your table and other vases in the tints you mentioned, and corsages to the women of the party? If you could find out for me the color of each gown it would greatly simplify matters for me."

I smothered a little gasp of dismay, although I had expected something of the kind ever since he had asked me what my color scheme was going to be. I did not want to accept his offer because of Dicky, yet how could I refuse it without seriously offending him and jeopardizing the very thing for which I was scheming so hard.

If it were not for Dicky I should not have hesitated for an instant, for the profusion of blossoms Mr. Veritzen would send would make of Mary's party a far more exotic festivity than I could have afforded. But ought I to accept these flowers when I knew Dicky's attitude toward my employer?

And then, as if the question had unlocked a tiny secret door in my brain, displaying a hideous picture—I was at the door of Dicky's studio and was seeing his hands clasp a necklace around Edith Fairfax's throat and lightly disclaim her protests that the gift was "too much" for her.

Truer Dicky upon the same day had brought similar baubles to every feminine member of our family and had explained those gifts and the one to Edith by saying that the necklaces of synthetic gems were the work of a man about whom Edith had written an article for the art magazine in whose ownership she and Dicky were partners. According to him the man in his gratitude had made an absurdly low price for the necklaces and Dicky had bought them for us and for Edith.

I had made no fuss. I remained myself, over that tableau in Dicky's private office, although many wives would have considered that they had sufficient provocation for a scene of temper and recrimination. Dicky owed me complacence over this proffered gift which, after all, was really for the pleasure of his niece, not me. But would he pay me that old debt or would he make things highly uncomfortable for me when he should learn of Mr. Veritzen's munificence?

Household Hints

Instead of blacking the gas stove, rub it over (also inside of the oven) with olive oil or boiled linseed oil. This will keep it a nice black without much trouble. To remove obstinate rust spots, rub them with sandpaper.

To polish a faucet, nothing is better than half of a lemon after the juice has been squeezed out. After scouring, wash it and polish with soft, dry cloth; it will shine like new. An orange peel also gives good results.

Vinegar and salt make a fine polish for brass and copper. Put salt on a soft cloth that has been dampened with vinegar, and rub the object to be polished. The same combination is one of the best cleaners for the inside of flower vases that have been stained.

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

There can be no definite rules as to how often the hair should be shampooed. Oily hair needs a soapy renovating every week if one isn't to look like a trained seal emerging from its bath. Dry hair can have its shampoo every three weeks. Normal hair, which is neither dry nor oily, does well with a bath every fortnight. Incidentally, there are differences in shampoos. Few are as thorough as they should be.

Food that looks appetizing, that appeals to the eye, the palate and the nose, sending out delicious odors, is more nourishing than food ordinarily prepared, because it excites the gastric juices, so helpful in the process of digestion. In time to come women will be better informed about foods. Maybe we'll find some special grocery item that will make hair grow, another one that will pink our finger nails or change the texture of the skin. Who knows?

You can take your choice between factory blushes and eye shadows. The beauty doctor says positively you can't have both. The little dolly who gets away best with eye shadows has a complexion of ivory tint, large, dark, expressive eyes and dark hair. Yaller-heads play safe by going slow on commercial beauty, the kind you buy at the make-up counter. Too much paint and the blonde sister piles on the birthdays, even birthdays that ain't. Too much contrast offered by fair skin and cornsilk-colored tresses.

When a girl is conscious of her qualities of beauty, points them out to the beholder, their charm lessens. Vanity is the product of the shallow mind. It is a satisfaction to any woman to look well. Every woman is thankful now and then that she doesn't stutter or that she wasn't cursed with a harelip. But beauty isn't the whole shopful—not external beauty. A pretty girl is as hateful when she is rude and over-bearing as a plain girl who hasn't any manners. Beauty, to make the grade, must be backed up with charming qualities.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

"It's just as easy to love a rich man, why bother with poor ones?"

That's what a mother said to her up-to-the-minute daughter, who already had the thought.

So the daughter hopped, skipped and jumped into matrimony. She took care not to land in the middle, but on the alimonial edge, instead, where it wouldn't be so hard or take so long to get out. She picked a rich fish and she landed him.

The rich fish had mighty nice people. Straight laced, perhaps, for this day and age, but awfully nice—really. They knew what was going on, but the son, who worked on about half a cylinder, didn't know. The girl had him doing a wedding lockstep before he woke up. In fact I doubt if he ever woke up though he is now on a siding, waiting for someone else to pick him up. He just figures he got pushed out. Which perhaps is smart of him, after all, but he still thinks she is a nice girl.

During the married life the girl got her kick out of riding in a shiny big car with a liveried chauffeur, and charging things, and wearing clothes pa never could have bought.

When she threw parties of the kind she enjoyed, she suddenly found her charge accounts stopped, and father-in-law called in the cars and livery and what not, and she was walking about here and there. Then the fun disappeared. It was nip and tuck to see who could say the meanest things. She could. And she did.

Then her picture on all the front pages with her legs crossed and her hat tilted stylishly, and her fine furs looking scrum. It was lovely while it lasted. She was pointed out as—well, as what she was, but the attention pleased her.

Alimony $50 a week and not a cent more.

Then she went home for Christmas, just to give the town a treat and its wasn't a big town. And she saw a very pretty young woman with a beautiful baby and a handsome husband, and they had a beautiful home, and a fine dog and a Persian cat, and a couple of maids with stiff white aprons, and a car, and they were all ideally happy. That was the girl next door who married the fellow they went to school with, who didn't have a nickel, but arrived by his own efforts.

The small town wife helped him and they salted away plenty. Got it all honestly—worked for it.

And the mother of the flop looked her over and meditated.

It was wonderful while it lasted, but now she's got to go out and get anotner dub, because she hasn't got the training to go in and help a man make a success. She's got to get a Willie whose papa gave it to him, or go to work. Heaven forbid. Never that.

Do you know her?

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Divorcee's Correct Signature

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly advise me as to the correct signature for a divorcee? I have no children.

M. E.

There are two forms of names used most often by women who are divorced. The first is the use of the last name of the maiden name as the first name of the formal name. Let me illustrate:

Suppose MILDRED EDMINGTON marries, and later divorces, JOHN BYRON. The name that she would adopt, if she abided by the custom of the society world that makes our forms, is MRS. EDMINGTON BYRON. This is the form that I enthusiastically recommend, for it has dignity; it registers her maiden surname, and her married surname; and it avoids the use of the first name, which is the best form for the formal name of a married woman, a widow, or a divorcee. To those who know what's what, this form of name registers at once that the woman knows the best form.

The second form — and one which I do not at all recommend, and which I do not think at all dignified—is the use of first name and last name of her maiden name, and the last name of her married name: Mrs. Mildred Edmington Byron—or the affiliated form, Mrs. Mildred Byron. This includes the first name of the maiden name, the thing to be avoided in the FORMAL name of a woman who is, or has been, married.

An Introductory Phrase

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to know if it is proper to introduce a friend to your parents by his first name, if you call him by his given name, or if he must be introduced by his last name?

DAILY READER.

Introduce him by his last name, but, if you wish, you might use his first name also. That is, say, "Mother, may I present Mr. Gerald Wood?" or more informally, "Mother, this is Mr. Gerald Wood." The mentioning of the first name, when we make an introduction, makes the introduction more informal, and still registers the good form of using the title.

Horoscopes

Sunday, February 1

Sunday's horoscope is a fairly inauspicious one, excepting for some minor activities relating to spiritual or secret matters. Affairs may lag and meet with frustration, the physical condition may be depleted or depressed, and mental attitudes and affairs may not be productive. Be careful with writings.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year beset with difficulty and frustration. There may be tenacious obstacles, depressed mental and physical conditions, although diplomacy or strategy may assist over bad places. But be careful with all manner of writings and shun litigation.

A child born on this day should be sober, studious and reticent, probably prone to gain its ends by secret or subtle influences or wisdom.

Monday, February 2

Monday's astrological forecast is for a very important and eventful year, with sudden change of far-reaching influence on the affairs and the life. This may be in connection with new projects or adventures, and should bring gratifying results, but are under the peril of rash or reckless impulses.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very important year with sudden change, new undertakings and environment, all of which should bring excellent success if a tendency to rash and impulsive grasp of the situation be controlled.

A child born on this day should be brilliant, ingenious and resourceful, and should attain good position, all of which may be negatived by a proclivity to rash, impulsive and quarrelsome conduct.

"LIVE BETTER FOR LESS"

Baptism of Fire, First Casualties Told by Pershing

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By JOHN J. PERSHING,
Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces.

CHAPTER XX.

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

Soon after the 1st Division entered a quiet sector of the Vosges the peaceful aspect of the situation was disturbed by a German raid on an isolated post of the 16th Infantry, November 3, 1917. A group was caught in a box barrage and, although the men made a courageous resistance, three were killed, five wounded and 12 captured.

These were the first casualties that had occurred in our army to units serving in the trenches. The dead were Corp. James B. Gresham and Pvts. Thomas F. Enright [Editor's Note—Pvt. Enright lived in the East End, Pittsburgh] and Merle D. Hay, all of Company F.

Gen. Pershing

The French took charge of the funerals and turned out a formal guard in addition to our own. The services were conducted by the French general, Bordeaux, who came with his full staff and delivered a beautiful oration over the graves. A large number of French troops also came informally to pay their final tribute.

This joint homage to our dead there under the fire of the guns seemed to symbolize the common sacrifices we were to make in the same great cause.

I returned to Chaumont November 9 from Paris, accompanied by Charles Crane and Joseph E. Willard, ambassador to Spain.

Another group of division commanders arrived in France on that date as observers. This contingent included Major Generals William M. Wright, James Treat, St. John Greble, Francis Kernan, A. P. Blocksom, William Sage and George Bell. Wright, Treat, Kernan and Bell later served with the A. E. F.

The ammunition question again became acute at that time, despite our agreements with the French, and their positive assurances that they would make prompt deliveries, but their explanation was that we had not furnished the full amount of raw material required.

Urges Quick Production

In my early reference to the prospects of procuring artillery of 75mm and 155mm calibers and ammunition for its use, it had been expected that nothing should diminish our efforts at home in their manufacture, but when the probability of delay and possibly failure of the French to furnish ammunition for these guns was reported to Washington my cable met with the complacent reply, much to my surprise, that: "The French government must furnish it for there is no other way of getting it. At the present time there is not in this country any actual output of ammunition of the types mentioned. None has been expected."

As the French contracts covered only a part of the amount deemed necessary, it was not understood why the ordnance department had done nothing. We were already behind in steel deliveries to the French by over 20,000 tons; the supply of powder and explosives was still uncertain, and the prospect of placing further contracts or even of obtaining regular deliveries on those already placed seemed doubtful.

The establishment of our own sources of supply at home appeared vital, and setting forth the above situation by cable, I added: "I cannot too strongly urge the greatest possible expedition in the production of artillery material and ammunition in America."

The difficulty of providing the French with raw material was largely traceable to the lack of shipping, and, of course, the unscientific use of what we had. The fact is that the ports at home were overcrowded with all sorts of material and supplies awaiting vessels.

The French had over 600,000 tons of supplies at seaboard, which they were unable to move, and were clamoring for 150,000 tons additional of steel rails.

Conference Held

The War Department had purchased over 100,000 tons of rails for us, but had been able so far to ship only 30,000 tons. The optimistic promises of the Department of a month or so previous that there would be plenty of shipping now began to look visionary.

As the situation in which we found ourselves regarding artillery ammunition was approaching a crisis, it became necessary to lay the whole question before the Inter-Allied Munitions Board.

After a full investigation of their resources, both the French and British concluded that they could undertake to meet our requirements, with the distinct understanding that their plants must be greatly increased in capacity and that we should furnish raw materials promptly.

Gen. Bliss

The late Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, chief of the War Department general staff, represented us in the Allied conference and reported the results and agreements reached. He had brought the latest data from home and his knowledge concerning steel and munitions enabled him to give valuable assistance to my chief of ordnance in our efforts to find a solution to the difficult munitions problem. He also strongly reinforced my appeals for motor transportation and urged the manufacture at home of heavy guns and ammunition.

A letter from Secretary of War Baker dated September 10, had only recently been received, and gave me an idea of some of his problems. In part he wrote as follows:

"At present it seems questionable whether I should come to France. If it were possible for me to go incognito and go over the situation with you on the ground without the interruptions which would be necessary were it known that I was in the country . . . while if I undertook to visit both London and Paris, my trip would be deemed to have a diplomatic character, which would be inopportune if not embarrassing.

Pershing Appreciated

"Moreover, it seems important for me not to relax my personal supervision of the preparation of supplies and men to be forwarded just at this time. But I am hopeful that I can come a little later, and, when our camps are thoroughly established and our preparation going forward as smoothly as I trust it soon will, an absence would be less difficult here and perhaps more helpful to you.

"Meanwhile I am sure you will understand my frankness when I tell you that your course from the moment you landed in England has given both the President and me the greatest satisfaction and pleasure. As you know, you started with our full confidence, but we feel happy to have our judgment justified as it has been at every point by your discretion, tact and effective activity.

"The work of preparing the Army here has gone forward with remarkable smoothness and in a day or two the National Guard will be in its camps. Already a substantial part of it is in camp and has begun its preparatory work.

"Meantime, the 16 National Army cantonments are substantially completed and the first contingents of drafted men are being received apparently without confusion or excitement. Early in October the entire number will be assembled and the arrangements promise speedy training for them, as their officers have already been assembled at the cantonments, a course of instruction prepared and the usual preliminary preparations for active work either begun or well under way.

Stresses Preparation

"On this side we hear rather frequently of the work your men are doing. Such French officers as have come to us and have seen your troops in France are enthusiastic in praise of their alertness and spirit, and, as the larger forces begin to arrive, no doubt even more impressive exhibitions will be given of what our people can do.

"I am especially concerned that our troops should not be engaged in actual fighting in France until they are there in such numbers and have made such thorough preparation that their first appearance will be encouraging both to their own morale and to the spirit of our people here.

"I think it goes without saying that the Germans will make a very special effort to strike swiftly and strongly against any part of the line which we undertake to defend, in order to be able to report to their people encouragingly about our participation and also with the object of discouraging our soldiers and our people as much as possible.

"I have no doubt this has all been present to your mind and I refer to it only because I want you to know that we will exercise all the patience necessary on this side and will not ask you to put your troops into action until in your own judgment both the time is opportune and the preparations thoroughly adequate.

"In the matter of selecting corps and division commanders, I constantly feel that I ought to have your advice and judgment. You realize of course the difficulty of selecting division commanders out of our army, made up as it is of very zealous and fine men, but necessarily men who have had no experience with the sort of warfare now being waged, and few if any of them having even had the experience of actually commanding a division of troops in maneuvers.

Wants Alert Officers

"From all that you have said, supplemented by all I have learned elsewhere, the need for young and physically strong men is apparent and I am perfectly willing to go any limit in meeting this requirement.

"It will, of course, necessitate passing over a substantial number of our older generals who are very eager to go to France and who in their own ideas and that of the country have certain rights to be preferred; but their occupations here in the training of troops is, of course, a valuable contribution to the cause and, whenever I can feel sure in the selection of the younger man that he actually has the capacity to develop to a sufficient extent to justify his being preferred to a man of greater experience, I shall not hesitate. But most of these younger officers present problems of judgment and forecast, and your advice on the subject would be most helpful.

"At present I am planning to send practically all of the general officers to France for a visit to the front, so that they will come back to their training camps with actual knowledge of the conditions of present methods of warfare. After they have been to France, they are to call on me individually to report, and I hope in that way to have opportunity to make personal estimate of their vigor and alertness both of mind and body.

March Recommended

"In the meantime, you of course will see them all while they are in France and I would be grateful if you would let me have an estimate of the impressions they make on you while they are actually at the scene of war and studying the conditions at the front.

Gen. Scott

"There is another subject upon which I want to say a confidential word. Gen. Scott will retire on the 22d of this month. He will, of course, be called back into active service and put in charge of one of our training camps, where his fine character and soldierly experience will be an inspiring example to the young men under him.

"Gen. Bliss, who has three times acted as chief of staff, will succeed Gen. Scott for the few months which intervene until his own retirement. But when Gen. Bliss retires in November, (December) it will be necessary to select a chief of staff, and my strong desire is to have a young man who has had some months of experience in France.

"My mind has rather run in the direction of Gen. March who, by the middle of November, will have had an excellent opportunity to become familiar with the whole situation abroad and whose experience in the War Department has been such that there would be no loss of time on his part in understanding the intricacies of bureau operation here. In addition to that, he is a man of positive and decided character.

Gen. March

"I realize, of course, that bringing Gen. March away might be a serious loss to you and I have by no means decided upon him for the place, but I would like to have your judgment on this question.

Hits Delay

"It seems to me that co-operation in Washington is of an importance impossible to overestimate, and that we can assure it best by having a young, aggressive man who will realize from actual observation and participation your difficulties, and be able to understand from the least hint what is necessary for us to do to be of the maximum support to you."

In view of the emergency that was so clearly set forth by the Joffre and Balfour missions when they visited the United States, and which was confirmed after my arrival in France and reported with all emphasis, I have never been able to understand the unnecessary delay caused by waiting six months for the construction of large cantonments before calling out men and assembling them for training.

Lord Balfour

Of course it was particularly urgent that the specialists and laborers needed in France to build up our facilities should have been provided as fast as they could be profitably employed, but nothing should have postponed the immediate mobilization of the combat units of the Regular Army and the National Guard.

After setting apart a large proportion of officers and men of the Regulars for duty in training camps and for assignment to new units, each unit could have been started to work with only enough of its skeletons to furnish a foundation, and this much of our preparation could have been accomplished in much less time than was taken to handle the problem as a whole.

As it was, the services of these already partially trained contingents were not available abroad until it was all but too late. The department failed to grasp the big problem until the last minute.

HEAT TUNNEL SPURS BUDS

Take the signs of spring which Miss Juliana Holmes, a co-ed, saw in the budding bushes that lined the walk around a sorority house on the Northwestern University quadrangle.

They looked like the real thing until a skeptic put out the information that a tunnel from the boiler heating the entire quadrangle had been warming the roots of the plants artificially all winter.

Nevertheless, the month of January in these parts has been one of the most remarkable on record for warmth and lack of precipitation, the Weather Bureau said. The temperature got as high as 49 degrees yesterday, prompting small boys to play baseball in their shirt sleeves and discard their ice skates for rollers.

Alleged Thief Slain In Police Ambush

CLEVELAND, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Two young men who robbed a filling station for the second time within a week ran into a police ambush last night and one of them was shot to death. His alleged accomplice was captured.

The dead man, John Clegg, alias Sullivan, 27, was killed by Patrolman Harry Mobley, who with Patrolman Albert Burns had guarded the station since the attendant was robbed of $31 last Wednesday. Clegg's alleged companion, who gave his name as William Peterson, was caught by Burns in an attempt to escape. The men had just robbed the station of $2.70, the officers said.

Girl's Case Delayed Until Check Arrives

EVANSTON, Ill., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Some allowance, Police Magistrate Harry H. Porter concluded, should be made for the allowance Elsie Dodo expects to get. Elsie, held for speeding, said:

"Please continue the case. I get my allowance every two weeks and the next one is due Thursday. I want father to send it before he finds out I got arrested."

Entangled in Rope, Freshman Strangled

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Believed to have become entangled in a clothes line in the basement of his home, Harold Winterfield, 15, high school freshman, was strangled to death yesterday.

DELAY MEXICAN GOLD PAYMENT

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—An agreement for a two-year postponement of gold payments due on the $500,000,000 defaulted debt of the Mexican government and the National Railways of Mexico under the terms of the Lamont-Montes De Oca arrangement of last July, has been reached, it was announced today.

The new agreement, supplemental to the one made last year by the international committee and Luis Montes De Oca, Mexican minister of finance, was decided on because of the decline in the value of the Mexican silver peso. The drop in the silver peso caused the amount set aside by the Mexican government in its budget for payment of the debt to be insufficient to meet the gold disbursements due, it was explained.

An actual moratorium is not provided for in the new agreement, as payment in silver pesos will continue during the two-year period of suspended gold payments and the Mexican government will continue responsible for the full amount in gold of the annual payments due in the next two years.

MOFFETT URGES NAVY BUILDING

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(Universal.)—Building up the American Navy to the full strength permitted under the London Naval Treaty was today being urged by Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department. Moffett made his plea for immediate action in an address before the sixth Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense. He said:

"You come to Washington at an opportune time. We are all looking toward one particular goal, the passage of the Navy building program at this session of Congress to enable us to make a start toward building under the London treaty navy.

"If we build up to this treaty we will have an effective and adequate navy for our needs. But such groups of Americans as you must let it be known plainly that the people of this country insist on having such a navy, or Congress may turn its attention to other matters."

AKERSON PLACE UNFILLED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—President Hoover is still looking for a man to occupy the office next to his at the White House after the resignation of George Akerson, his secretary, has become effective.

Now it is understood that Akerson, who resigned to take an executive position with a large moving picture concern, will remain for another week. But that he probably cannot stay longer.

He is scheduled to sail for Europe shortly after the middle of the month and is anxious to go to California before beginning his European trip.

Weather Conditions Reversed in Canada

At Lethbridge, in Alberta, the thermometer yesterday rose to 64 degrees above, while in Northern Ontario, it was 22 below zero. Eastern Ontario districts also suffered from severe cold. At Ottawa it was 14 below.

Girl Hysterical, Saves Receipts From Bandit

WHEELING, W. Va., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—A slip of a girl, Inez Clayton, who sells tickets for a Wheeling movie theater, found herself looking into a pistol last night.

Inez laughed.

REFEREE FREED IN GEM THEFT

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(INS.)—William J. O'Connor, Buffalo fight referee and politician, today was freed of a charge that he brought into the state $200,000 worth of jewelry stolen from Florida hotel guests, but he was continued in $25,000 bail pending disposition of another indictment.

The charge pending is that O'Connor received a ring belonging to Mrs. Sadie P. Kaufman, which was among gems recovered in a hotel raid here last May. The jury hearing the stolen jewelry case returned a verdict of not guilty last night.

O'Connor was arrested with four others last May 26 following the raid on his hotel room. O'Connor had just been handed $25,000 in bills by Alex Friedman, a jeweler. Friedman, it was testified, had given O'Connor the money in return for the jewels, O'Connor stating he received them merely as agent for Noel Scaffa, a private detective.

At the time of the entrance of the officers, O'Connor tossed the money out of the hotel window. About $17,500 was recovered.

DEATH PLOTTER GETS LIFE

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Paul Jones, 21, automobile salesman, was sentenced to life imprisonment on pleading guilty to a charge of murder in the slaying of Mrs. Maude Martin, of Coffeyville, Kan.

Muriel Sullivan, 18, waitress, of Seminole, Okla., previously had been given a life sentence as the actual slayer. She confessed shooting Mrs. Martin to death on Jones' promise she would be paid $100.

The state charges Dr. Seth A. Brainard, of Coffeyville, employed Jones to dispose of Mrs. Martin so the woman could not appear against Brainard at his approaching trial for murder in connection with the death of an 18-year-old girl from an alleged illegal operation.

Steel Operations Scheduled to Rise

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Blast furnace operations in the Mahoning Valley district were scheduled to rise to their highest levels in many months today with blowing in of the 425-ton furnace of the Sharon Steel Hoop Company at Lowellville. The Carnegie Steel Company also announced its Sharon blooming mill would be operated on three eight-hour turns instead of two 10-hour shifts starting Monday.

700 Return to Work At Hupp Motor Plant

CLEVELAND, Jan. 31.—(AP.)—Seven hundred men have returned to work at the Cleveland plant of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation within the last month, A. L. Englander, Cleveland distributor, said the renewed activity resulted from increased schedules following automobile shows in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

FOLLOW PERSHING'S STORY AND WIN CASH!

$3,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES

For Readers of the Sun-Telegraph Who Follow Pershing's Own Story of the War

CAREFULLY READ THESE SIMPLE RULES

RULE 1—With the beginning of the publication of General Pershing's Own Story of the World War, Monday, January 12, 1931, the daily and Sunday Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph inaugurates a Pershing test in which $3,000.00 in cash prizes will be awarded to readers who submit the correct or most nearly correct answers to a set of ten questions pertaining to dates and episodes chronicled in the Pershing narrative. Contestants will also be asked to submit a letter of not more than 200 words to the question "What is the most important episodes chronicled in the Pershing memoirs published in the Sun-Telegraph and why?" This letter will be judged as a part of the Pershing test with the answers to the ten questions. The test questions will be published from time to time during the publication of the story in the Sun-Telegraph and contestants will be allowed ten days to prepare and submit their answers after the last chapter has been printed. The Pershing story will run approximately ten weeks. The exact date of the time limit for submitting answers will be announced later—contingent upon the closing date of the story.

RULE 2—The Pershing test is open to everyone except employes of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and their families.

RULE 3—A total sum of $3,000.00 in cash will be awarded as prizes—$500.00 to each of six classes or groups as follows:

CLASS NO. 5—Members of the American Legion and Other Organizations That Include World War Veterans.

CLASS NO. 6—All Other Readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

RULE 4—The prizes in each class will be awarded as follows:

FIRST PRIZE	$200.00
SECOND PRIZE	100.00
THIRD PRIZE	50.00
FOURTH PRIZE	25.00
FIFTH PRIZE	15.00
SIXTH TO TENTH PRIZES (INC.), $10.00 EACH	50.00
ELEVENTH TO TWENTY-SECOND PRIZES (INC.), $5 EACH	60.00
TOTAL	$500.00
132 CASH PRIZES IN ALL, TOTALING	$3,000.00

In case of ties, contestants so tied will be awarded equal prizes

RULE 5—The answers submitted in the Sun-Telegraph Pershing test will be examined by a special board of judges, none of whom will be employes of the Sun-Telegraph. The board of judges will make the awards and their judgment will be final. The sets of answers when submitted become the property of the Sun-Telegraph and will not be returned. All sets of answers submitted must be mailed first class postage prepaid and directed to the Pershing Contest Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

RULE 6—You do not have to buy a daily or Sunday Sun-Telegraph to participate in this contest. There is free access to the files of the Sun-Telegraph at the public libraries or at the publication offices of this newspaper.

U. S. TAX YIELD DROPS IN STATE

The Internal Revenue Bureau announced collections of taxes from residents of Pennsylvania last year amounted to $241,659,584, as against $217,977,687 in 1929.

All but $16,529,829 was paid in income tax last year, miscellaneous taxes falling in that sum from $23,701,876 in 1929. Income tax payments increased by more than $1,000,000 in 1930 over 1929.

Miscellaneous taxes from the three collection districts of the state for the two years were:

POSTAL THEFTS SEND 3 TO JAIL

David Smith, 22, and Herman Baumann, 20, of Scottdale, and Albert Weaver, 20, of North Scottdale, were each sentenced by Federal Judge Nelson McVicar to serve six months in the Westmoreland County jail and pay fines of $1 each, when they pleaded guilty to breaking into the postoffices at Ruffsdale and Alverton. Harry Baumann, 25, another defendant, was sentenced to one month in jail.

Smith and Weaver admitted entering the postoffices and stealing postal funds, later dividing the loot at the home of Baumann, in West Overton. The loot included $13 in pennies. Spending of the pennies by the defendants led to their arrest.

Fined for Trying To Get Into Store

Charles Yssick, 21, who lives over a chain store at 3011 Preble avenue, was fined $50 or 60 days in jail after admitting he had attempted to enter the store Thursday night, before Magistrate Ray Schneider, in North Side Police Court, today. Later he was turned over to city detectives for questioning regarding several robberies.

TIGER HEART -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert shares her home and fortune with her half-sister, Kitty, whom she found destitute in New York's underworld. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance. Believing Jim to be a fortune-hunter, Connie, to save Kitty, enlists the aid of Duke Garson, Kitty's friend and underworld intelligence man. He warns Connie that her butler is a crook and that her mother should guard her pearls. Later, Duke is about to declare his love for Connie when Jim appears. He claims he was held up and is afraid to go home. Connie invites him to stay. Duke doubts Jim's story. That night, Mrs. Calvert's pearls are stolen. Duke questions the maid about them. The maid doubts Kitty's honesty. Mrs. Calvert becomes ill after the excitement. Duke accuses Jim of lying about being held up. Jim says he lied because he did not trust Duke and wanted to get back to the Calvert home. Connie tells her mother that she is not sure whether she loves Duke. Duke seeks the butler's aid to solve the robbery mystery.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

"Yes, sir, I'd name a woman," Higgins repeated.

"What woman?"

"God knows I never thought I'd turn out to be a stool pigeon against anybody, but you are a friend of mine, Garson, and anything you say goes with me," Higgins said, with an attempt at sincerity. "You can't live in a family like I have been for several years without getting a pretty good line on 'em. Take the cook, Mrs. Lahey, no chance there—dumb but honest. Miss Connie and her mother, high class people, not a chance. Who's left? Miss Kitty and Mary Smith, the maid. Take your choice."

Strange Actions

"Are you just guessing, Higgins, or do you know something?" Garson asked him, shrewdly.

"I'm guessing and I ain't. Leave Miss Kitty out for a minute. Take Smith—I've been watching her in the kitchen, in the pantry, and around the house—she's nervous as hell, Duke. Now, why should she be nervous—that's what I'm asking you?"

"I don't know," Garson responded, levelly. "You know her best—is she a friend of yours?"

"Well, she ain't crazy about me. You know, Duke, I'm the kind that likes a bit of fun sometimes, but there's not a chance on earth with Smith. She's one of these darned, dried-up New Englanders. So far as I know she's never had a sweetheart. Maybe that's the trouble with her—maybe she's got these suppressed emotions you read about."

"All right—go on."

"All that's just speculation. Now, here's what I know. When Mr. Tracy was here this morning I happened to see Smith talking to him."

"That's not exactly a crime, Higgins."

"Wait; they were standing in a corner of the hall, and he wasn't just exchanging a casual word with her. No; she was talking to him so low that I couldn't hear, but she certainly was meaning what she was saying. Here's the thing that caught my eye: She had one hand on his arm. Servants don't act that way toward guests—not Smith, anyway. Tracy brushed her hand down once and she put it back. He said something to her and turned and walked away. Figure it out for yourself from there on, Duke."

Garson concealed, carefully, the interest he had in the story.

"From what you've said, you might suspect Tracy even more than the girl," he asserted, warily.

Garson Puzzled

"I might, but I don't," Higgins said, with a faint stubbornness. "He's too soft."

"Well, I'll remember what you told me," Garson said, dismissal in his voice. "Thanks very much, Higgins; I'll see you later."

Left alone, he began slowly, thoughtfully, to co-ordinate in his mind this new information. A possible connection between Jim Tracy and Mary Smith, meager, suppressed, intense—even if it existed, might easily mean nothing, as far as the pearls were concerned. Probably no such connection existed. Higgins probably had imagined what he had seen. That was one way of looking at it. On the other hand—

No, it seemed a waste of thought, of brain power, to imagine Jim Tracy as a thief. Whatever he was, he wasn't that. At worse, he was no more than a play boy, a little brother of the rich. If he sought to marry for money, it was something vastly different from downright dishonesty.

And the girl, Mary Smith—there was a prim impatience about her, an instant repudiation of any personal frailty. There was something about her as hard as stones. Her native Connecticut and the honesty of New Englanders was a by-word, a tradition. True, she might be guilty of anything, but by all external tests she was not at all the criminal type. As he tried to link Mary Smith and Jim Tracy with the theft of the pearls Garson found his mind constantly denying any such theory, and manufacturing reasons to refute them.

Maid Leaving

The whole truth was that his interest in the pearls was secondary. His only real interest was in Connie. Nevertheless, he knew the stolen pearls gave him reason for remaining in the house; too, they stimulated an intellectual curiosity. If possible, he meant to solve the mystery.

Such work, of course, fell within the province of a detective, but what Garson had seen of paid man hunters, he was confident that he had, at least, an equal mental equipment. In the main, they depended upon stool-pigeons, luck, and the innate stupidity of criminals. More often than not they failed in their business of detecting, but this was not unusual; men in all walks of life were constantly failing. The worst possible failure, he conceived, was to miss the fine essence of happiness to be found in human relations.

It was strange, but Duke Garson never before felt so definitely the value of the intimate and personal. He had regarded mankind as a whole and knit fabric. Now that he knew Connie Calvert, he was conscious of an acute dissatisfaction, a suspense of uncertainty. Here and now, when he should have been comfortably happy, he was obsessed with an obstinate mental discomfort. Something unpredictable and illusive of understanding was occurring in his life stream. . . .

An impatience, a desire for physical activity, seized him and he found his hat. When he returned from a vigorous tramp along the road and through the wooded hills he found Connie, Kitty and Jim Tracy in the living room; in a few minutes dinner would be served.

"There's no news—nothing has happened," Connie told him, in response to his query. "The only thing is that Mary Smith is leaving. She says she needs a rest, and she is leaving tomorrow."

DAILY TRUE STORY — Advice to Lovers

Isobel Barnes had a friendly smile or wave of the hand for all of the "boys" as she passed through the news room of the Morning Ensign to her little cubicle of an office.

He loved her.

Isobel knew this. She was rather glad, and yet sorry. This was because, to her, the most important thing in life was her work. Leave it to others to love and to mate. Her destiny was to help mankind, and womankind, to solve their love problems and their marital problems.

For Isobel was getting along splendidly now as "Dixie Madison," that oracle of heartaches who advertised the lovelorn through the columns of the Morning Ensign.

Isobel hung up her hat and coat, tried to smooth back the little curls that persisted in making her look more youthful and tantalizingly pretty, and turned to her desk.

Isobel sat down, drew a waste paper basket up beside her, picked up the letter opener and started to work.

Every day it was the same—and yet different. Many of the letters would be too inane to heed. Many would be kidding letters from Smart Alecks. These were dropped disdainfully into the basket.

And from the lot were the many sincere letters—good people seeking helpful advice; people with problems that seemed pretty but were all important to the writers.

Then she would sort them. Some needed personal answers, which they received. Some could be printed in full or in part, along with Isobel's sage, helpful advice, that others might read and take profit.

Gives Advice

"Dear Dixie Madison: I love an unusually sweet girl, the sort created to be a homemaker. She loves me, or at least likes me better than any other man, but she insists that marriage is a stumbling block to a career and a fetter to her freedom and individuality. How can I argue her out of this stand?

"George Wentworth Watson."

Isobel read it twice. She liked the tone of this letter. No beating about the bush, no waste of words. She put it one side, among those to be answered personally.

After luncheon, when she had fixed up her letters to be printed, with her advice, she started in on the others, that were to be answered by mail.

When she came to the Watson letter she pondered a moment and then wrote:

"Dear Sir: Go straight to the point with this girl as clearly and concisely as you have in your letter. Make her understand that no career open to woman can equal the career of a wife, mother, homemaker.

"DIXIE MADISON."

Isobel and Thad went to the show that night. They had supper later and danced a little. And again Isobel explained to Thad that he was a dear boy, but she wasn't interested in matrimony—not even with him.

It was about this time that Polly Harte came over from the Globe, where she had been a successful "Sob Sister." Isobel knew Polly quite well. She introduced Thad to Polly. He was one of the few newspaper men who hadn't chanced to meet Polly.

Another Letter

Thad was telling Polly how well he liked her "Daddy Winslow — Honey-Bunch Henson" story. Isobel left them and hurried into her office.

This day she found another letter from Mr. George Wentworth Watson. It was:

"Dear Dixie Madison:—Alas, your advice doesn't work. My sweetheart refuses to forget her silly ideals about liberty and individuality and freedom. Now what?

"George Wentworth Watson."

Then she changed her mind, because she tried to be honest. "Perhaps it's the girl who is a fool," she said, and recovered the letter from the basket. Then she wrote:

"Dear Sir:—Time flies and gets no younger. I can sense that you are an unusually good husband type. Fortunately there are many sweet girls destined to happy wifehood. Why waste time on this girl with the adamant heart? My advice is for you to find another girl who appreciates your worth—and be happy. "Dixie Madison."

Isobel was thinking that perhaps, some day, somewhere, this silly girl who had refused to marry the interesting, and sensible George Wentworth Watson, would be lonely and sorry.

"Night, Thad" Isobel said, tapping his shoulder.

"Night," he said, and continued to gaze up at the smoke. Isobel glanced at him and hurried out.

Isobel wondered if he had a headache. He never had a grouch with her. It was all so unusual.

But Thad did seem to be downright mad at her in a coldly polite and dignified way. He greeted her as "Miss Barnes" and had no further talk with her. If she didn't happen to speak to him when she went out, he did not bother to speak to her.

"Get out—I'm busy," she said.

"Forget it, Dixie Madison. I have come to see you professionally."

"Professionally?"

"Sure thing, Miss Barnes. I want your advice as to types—don't you think that Polly Harte is just the type for me?"

"Type for you? For what?"

"Wife. What's your low-down? Wouldn't we make an ideal match of it?"

"Are you going to marry Polly Harte?"

"I'm asking you."

"Asking—asking me what?"

"If you would advise me. You know me. You know Polly. How about it, now?"

"Thad French are you going to marry Polly?"

"Why not?"

"Why—er—will she make you a nice home? Can she cook? Would she like to give up her career?"

Why not?"

"Well—Oh, really, Thad, what can I say? If you love her and she loves you, of course, that's different."

"What's love got to do about it? I want a home. Polly is a sweet kid and pretty—

Writes Appeal

"Would you marry without love? Oh, Thad, wait until you find the girl you love and who loves you."

"I have, but she won't marry me. I'm looking at her, now!"

"So you were only joking, Thad."

"Never more serious in my life."

"But Thad, unless you love each other—don't you see?"

"I have your own advice to do this," Thad said and he handed Isobel her letter to George Wentworth Watson in which she advised him not to waste his time on the girl with the adamant heart but to find another girl. Isobel glanced at it.

"So you wrote those letters?" Thad nodded.

Isobel turned to her typewriter and hammered the keys. She yanked out the paper and handed it to Thad. He read:

"Dear Mr. George Wentworth Watson: Why not make one last appeal to the sweetheart you love? She may have grown more sensible by this time. Dixie Madison."

"Are you more sensible, Isobel?" Thad asked.

"No," she said, "I've lost what sense I had—I'm going to marry you, Thad French!"

LOWBROWED. ANOTHER THING ABOUT RENTING A CAR IS THAT YOU GOT TO GO AND GET IT AND BRING IT BACK. NO, A RENTED CAR IS OUT.
AT HOME WE'RE SO ACCUSTOMED TO A CAR. NIMRODS BROTHER LETS US HAVE HIS CAR ALMOST EVERY TIME WE ASK FOR IT.
WELL, IT'S JUST TOO BAD ABOUT THEM.
WE TAKE GOOD CARE OF THAT CAR TOO. FILL IT UP WITH GAS, AIR, WATER. WE'RE ATTACHED TO IT, TOO. OFTEN IN THE MIDDLE OF THE NIGHT I GET UP AND GO OVER TO THE GARAGE WHERE THE MAN NEXTDOOR LETS US KEEP IT TO SEE THAT IT'S O. K.
JUST LET THEM TALK. BUT DON'T OFFER THEM THE CAR.
YES, WE DO LOVE THAT CAR, AND TAKE CARE OF IT. RAISE THE TOP WHEN IT RAINS. EVERYTHING.

Further Confessions of a Confessions Writer

What Has Happened Thus Far?—Yesterday we left the innocent confessions writer with the confessions editor, where we find them still in conference, as the saying goes.

By "Bent Blossom,"

After all these yeahs, I am somewhat in a daze as to the secret of the confession editor's power over meh. I try to be fair—I want to be fair. But I cannot but draw the conclusion that he took, or at least sought to take, advantage of my innocense. He new very well I had never written a confessions article. And yet he handed me tablet and paper, saying, "Now, if you please, dash off an article and I will see if it meets with my approval. If so, well and good. I will see you frequently. You shall be paid well—and you shall never want for anything so long as you please yours truly."

I look back at that moment with fear and trembling. There I sat, in the flush of health, one foot on the threshold of success, the other on the editor's desk. Would I make good in a big way? I noticed that I was trembling—still trembling. In fact I had been trembling ever since he closed the door and started tossing his eraser into the air and catching it. I didn't like the way he looked at me.

Hours, it seemed, passed before I could even collect my thoughts. What would I confess? Suddenly it dawned upon me that I didn't have anything to confess to. I was so young—so unawares. And then, all of a sudden, I had an idear. Quickly——

Great American Tragedy

Prohibition Is Made Tragic by Wreckage It Is Making of American Youth.

Prohibition is the great American mass tragedy.

If you doubt this, look about you. See how it has corrupted public officials. See how it has turned homes into breweries and distilleries and places of drunken revelry. See how its evil effects have invaded the schools.

AND SEE HOW SINCERE JUDGES MUST PERVERT THE LAW TO DEAL WITH THE SITUATION.

A judge in a Seattle court has just exiled a 15-year-old high school girl to another state. Her alternative was a long term in a correctional institution.

A boy of about the same age was given the same choice.

They had been two of a party of 27 high school students who had chartered a yacht, taking it on an all night cruise during which there was much drinking. Investigation by school authorities disclosed that at least 97 students in the institution were involved in a series of escapades which included drinking bouts and other sophisticated adventures.

The girl's mother is a widow, hard working. She must keep the home together, she thought. And while she was working away from home, this sinister thing which is corroding America, and especially the youth of America, was working IN her home, destroying it and everything in it which she held dear.

This boy and girl were not banished from Seattle because Seattle is worse than other American cities. It is not.

The judge banished these children from Seattle, not because he is a bad judge, which he is not, but because, when it comes to prohibition and its human wreckage, he doesn't any more know what to do than other American public officials.

This case is cited, not because liquor-induced delinquency among the young is so infrequent as to make it notable, but because the case fittingly illustrates and illuminates two kinds of helplessness, one of which is paralyzing America today and the other promising to devitalize America tomorrow.

The judge was helpless, not knowing what to do, so he passed this particular boy-and-girl problem on to another state.

Our youths are helpless because we have created for them and surrounded them with an enemy against which they are powerless to defend themselves and against which we are too craven or too fanatical or too stupid or too corrupt to defend them.

Prohibition is made tragic by the hundreds of killings which have marked the course of enforcement; by the habit of excess in drink which has been fastened upon the American home; by the dropping from public consciousness of the SUBSTANCE of true temperance in a mad grasping at the SHADOW of forcible denial by law. But more than by anything else, it is made tragic BY THE WRECKAGE IT IS MAKING OF AMERICAN YOUTH.

For 5,000 years and until the present growing generation, youth has been pretty much the same.

Now it is undeniably different—in America. Commenting on this change, the Wickersham report says:

"It is reflected in a different way of regarding drunken youth, in a change in the class of excessive drinkers and in the increased use of distilled liquor in places and connections where formerly it was banned."

In another paragraph the report discusses "drinking by uth, AS TO WHICH . . . THERE IS A GREAT MASS EVIDENCE."

And in another place:

"Votes in colleges show an attitude of hostility or contempt for the law on the part of those who are not unlikely to be leaders in the next generation."

What accounts for this sudden change in our youth—the "modern tempo?"

The war?

That won't do, either. History has known many wars. America had five before the World War, including the war between the states which acutely and intimately and poignantly touched every person then living in the United States without leaving an aftermath of moral subsidence.

The automobile?

No. The automobile liberates millions for clean living and enslaves none in the chains of bad habit.

Something is happening to the youth of America today that never happened to the youth of any other country or any other time.

So far as underlying moral factors are concerned, the only way in which America today is different from the America of yesterday, or essentially different from other nations, existent or dead, is that we stupidly attempted a short cut to a new morality by legislation when the only sure road is EDUCATION.

Adult America has committed a terrible crime against its children. The Wickersham report admits it, if official admission need be added to common knowledge.

We can expiate this crime in some measure by retracing our steps out of the blind alley of prohibition, into the light of education and onto the high road to true temperance from which fanatics beguiled us toward national ruin.

Widows and Widowers

Mere Man Is Out of Luck.

It is better to be a wife than a husband, if there's anything in figures. A wife has an excellent chance to become a widow. A husband has a slim chance to become a widower. In fact, the odds are two to one in favor of the wife and against the husband. That may be an injustice, but it is a fact.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company makes this disquieting discovery—for men—after a survey of the widower situation. It found that women are apt to live longer than men, anyway, and that the average married woman invariably survives her husband.

Most husbands are older than their wives at marriage, and hence start with the cards stacked against them. If a man is five years older than his wife, for instance, he has but 40 chances in 100 of attending her funeral. And if he is 15 years older he has but 26 chances in 100.

There must be a moral in these statistics, though it is difficult to draw. Staying single won't help, because the figures also prove that married men live longer than bachelors. You are forced to the conclusion that men are born out of luck, and that whichever way they play it, they lose. It's a sad world, gents.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

Verily, my daughter, the reasons why a man looketh askance upon matrimony and seeketh to escape it are plainer than a Broadway beauty without her make-up.

* * *

For, why should a man joyfully exchange the caresses of many damsels for the criticism of ONE, and the privilege of kissing a la carte for the duties of the domestic table d'hote?

But, the reasons why he DOTH marry are stranger and more unaccountable than the way of a woman that driveth a motor car.

* * *

Lo, when he weddeth, every man thinketh in his heart that it is for LOVE alone. Yet, when one man marrieth for love nine hundred and ninety-nine marry for adventure, for novelty, and for a change.

* * *

* * *

Because a damsel's family have set their hands against him and opposed him; and every man loveth a fight for its own sake.

* * *

Because he hath gone into a flirtation beyond his depth, and seeth no other way of escape.

* * *

* * *

* * *

* * *

* * *

* * *

* * *

* * *

* * *

Because he is poor and lonely, because he is rich and happy, because he is young and impulsive, because he is old and weary, because he needeth a stimulant, because he needeth a rest—and likewise "JUST BECAUSE!"

* * *

Verily, verily, it is never love alone; but the woman, the mood or the accident, which driveth a man into marriage.

* * *

LIFE'S SPECIAL LIMITATIONS

By Archibald Henderson

The temporal limitation of life is so deeply imbedded in human consciousness that we seldom if ever escape its incidence. It is a problem which confronts us in our daily life, and is constantly brought to our attention by sickness, death, accident, as well as by actuaries and insurance agents. The special limitation of life is a much less familiar notion. It is well to take stock of man's situation in this respect as it stands today.

So far as science can categorically state and prove conclusively, life does not exist anywhere in the cosmos save on the earth and in its immediate locality. It may well be that there is life on Mars or Mercury, or even on a thousand planets which have not familiar names from Greek mythology. Certain it is that if life exists elsewhere in the cosmos it must be of a very different nature from life as we know it on the earth. It is possible that there is some form of very thin, scraggly vegetation, on the moon, for example. There may be strange, highly advanced beings on Mars, capable of colossal engineering feats of great skill and ingenuity. In the innumerable island universes which move majestically in the remote regions of outer space there may be countless strange races, tribes, nations of living beings, with features and shapes and characteristics of which we have no conception. However, we know enough of the forces which operate on certain of the planets to be quite sure that such living beings, if they do exist, are very different from those with which we are acquainted. As stated in "The Science of Life," for example, a man reconstructed to walk on Mars would be crushed to death by his own weight on the earth.

Life is very closely restricted to the earth, so far as we are able to determine at the present time. Life ceases even before we have reached the summits of our highest mountains; and life cannot be maintained, except artificially and by mechanical protective devices, very far down beneath the surface of the sea.

The airplane has enabled man to soar far above even Mount Everest. It may be that man has already climbed to the summit of that towering peak. In 1924, G. L. Mallory and A. C. Irvin set off from a camp pitched on Mount Everest at a height of 26,800 feet. When last seen they were still struggling upwards in the mists, which veiled them forever from mortal eyes. In 1927 Capt. Gray, of the United States Army Aviation Service, reached an altitude of 42,470 feet; but he lost his life through his oxygen running out as he descended. The greatest height attained by any bird, so far as is known, is 23,000 feet, achieved by the condor of the Andes.

Nor can life descend far beneath the surface of the sea. A diver can go down 300 feet, a whale the better part of a mile. A submarine is very heavily restricted in its range of submergence. Man's vertical range, in both air and water, is no more than eight miles!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

In our town, two stores recently cut their sales forces. In one store, thirty-six women were released—in the other, twenty-five.

One store released married women and kept the single girls.

A survey was taken of the married women workers—both of those who were released and those who were kept. In both cases it was shown that practically all were serious workers who were helping to pay for homes or who were supporting children. In several cases, they were also supporting ill or idle husbands.

"Yes, I know these facts," said one proprietor, "but I don't think it helps matters, in the long run, to employ a married woman. It's apt to make grafters of men. And the children get to running the street. The place for a woman when she marries is in her own home. If she goes out to work, she either takes a job from a man or from some single girl who has no other means of support. That's why I discharged the married women and kept the single girls."

"I see things just opposite," said the other proprietor. "I think the married woman needs the job more than the single girl. Single girls aren't really as helpless as you'd think. Most of them are living with their own families or their relations. And if they do lose a job temporarily it doesn't involve so many dependents as it does when the married woman worker loses hers.

"Besides, in a time like this, when you must get your money's worth for every dollar you spend, the married woman is a better investment than the single girl. She has so much more at stake and she has more judgment. She is more steady and reliable and not so man-crazy. If I had my way, I'd never employ anything but married women workers."

The discharged women were also in disagreement. The single girls complained that the place for a married woman was in the home . . . that they should depend on their husbands for support . . . that they "only work to buy nicer clothes" . . . that they've no right taking jobs from men or other women who need them more.

The married women retorted that jobs belonged to whoever could get them and fill them best . . . that no decent woman could stand by and let her children, and perhaps her husband, starve simply because she wasn't supposed to work . . . that they didn't buy a quarter as many clothes as the single girls . . . that, by building homes and keeping families together, they earned first right to any job.

There you have the arguments of both employers and employes . . . arguments which are sweeping America today. Those arguments won't subside with bettering business conditions. The more business, the fiercer the clash between the two classes of women workers. Which side has the right of it?

IF YOU WERE THE PROPRIETOR OF A STORE, FACED WITH THE NECESSITY OF CUTTING YOUR WORK FORCE, WHICH WOULD YOU DISCHARGE . . . THE MARRIED WOMAN WORKER OR THE SINGLE GIRL?

And how about the arguments of these two bosses?

Do you agree that married women workers are more reliable? Or do you prefer the younger, livelier girl?

Do you think that married women workers should be supported by their husbands? And if he can't find work—or if his wage isn't sufficient to support the children . . . what then?

And how about "taking the jobs from men" . . . does the married woman worker take the job from a man any more than the single woman worker? Or is there any real reason why men should be given first chance at jobs?

Plenty of questions . . . no end to them. Not interesting? Just try them on any group of workers. MAYBE YOU'LL BE SURPRISED!

Wise Words

Common sense is a phrase employed to denote that degree of intelligence, sagacity and prudence which is common to all men.—Fleming.

The tiny ant, a creature of great industry, drags with its mouth whatever it can, and adds it to the heap which she is piling up, not unaware nor careless of the future.—Horace.

Passionate expressions and vehement assertions are no arguments, unless it be of the weakness of the cause that is defended by them, or of the man that defends it.—Chillingworth.

Let us remember those that want necessaries, as we ourselves should have desired to be remembered had it been our sad lot to subsist on other men's charity. —Atterbury.

Dark Dolores

Dolores, dark Dolores,
In your glowing Southern land,
I wonder if you walk today
Along the sun-warmed sand,
And listen to the little waves
That stumble up the beach,
And laugh at them and mock them
In your languid, liquid speech?

Dolores, dark Dolores,
It is summer there with you,
Your patio is filled with bloom,
Your sky is ever blue;
I wonder if you think sometimes
Of days we vowed to hold
Forever fresh in memory,
Though all things else waxed old?

You may forget, Dolores,
Those days so dear, so far;
But through drear winters I shall dream
Of summer where you are!

How Mr. Deasy Can Help

Electrification of Pennsylvania Would be Real Service—Brief Comment on Local News.

J. F. Deasy, the Pennsylvania Railroad's new vice president here, said at a luncheon in his honor at t Chamber of Commerce yesterday, that he wishes to share t problems of Pittsburgh and be helpful in every way possib There was a fine spirit in what Mr. Deasy said, and the Su Telegraph is going to take him at his word and make a sug gestion. Do everything in your power, Mr. Deasy, to have Pennsylvania lines in the Pittsburgh district electrified.

The harm that the smoke nuisance does called conspicuously to public attention by the papers re the meeting of the American Society of Heating and Ventil ing Engineers here this week. The railroads are among t worst offenders. It is to be hoped that Mr. Deasy not only w do what he can to electrify the Pennsylvania, but that, pend the completion of that improvement, he will keep everla ingly after the firemen on P. R. R. locomotives with the a monition that no more smoke is to be emitted from the stack than can possibly be helped.

The status of voting machines in Pennsylvania with suits pending in a number of counties to prevent the use various types of machine, stands out in sorry contrast wit situation elsewhere. The annual report of the Board of Elec of New York City, just published, praises voting machines ing that in that city last year they greatly expedited the cas and tabulation of the vote, lightened the duties of election ficers, and permitted the result to be known at an earlier h than ever before. After the litigation has been cleared aw Pennsylvania will enjoy a similar boon.

The brochure entitled "Tragedies That Pass U By," which is being circulated in connection with the campaig for funds now being conducted by the Federation of Jewis Philanthropies of Pittsburgh, is one of the most eloquent of th various appeals that have been addressed to the public lately. It is none too easy to raise $450,000, but with the need presented so poignantly as it is in this pamphlet it is inconceivable that the effort should fail.

*Col. Henry W. Shoemaker, United States min*ister to Bulgaria and publisher of the Altoona Tribune, has collected and recently published some exceedingly interesting facts about Pennsylvania Jews—things that every Pennsylvanian should know. He tells us that Rebecca Gratz, of Philadelphia, a very beautiful woman noted for her charities, was the prototype of the heroine in Sir Walter Scott's novel "Ivanhoe." Another famous Pennsylvania Jew was Haym Salomon, who helped finance the Revolutionary War. It is proposed—and the proposal has merit—that a permanent memorial be erected to him. The Legislature might well give the matter consideration.

It is gratifying to know that the ... s of so- of Pennsylvania's pioneer Jews are preserved in place names Frankstown is named for Stephen Franks, an early trader with the Indians. Aaronsburg and Gratz are named for Jewish families. Col. Shoemaker states that Jewish settlers came to Pennsylvania as early as 1702 and founded Schaefferstown in Lebanon County. "These devout Hebrews," he tells, "were of the opinion that the Indians were the lost tribes of Israel and came to the Pennsylvania frontier to re-convert them to Juda... This is an incident in Pennsylvania history that has received the attention from historians that it deserves.

NEW YORK DAY BY D...

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Purely personal piffle: to my notion is zero in eating. The late Kin Hubbard the funniest small town story I ever heard. I have same model gray hat for 15 years. For no particular always wanted to visit Norfolk, Va.

I can watch sea gulls for hours. No one makes a curtain speech like Otis Skinner. Secretly I'd like to talk like Back Bay Bostonians. I have been able to sell but one poem. There are three people whose profiles spoil my evening. The most fidgety fellow I know is Will Rogers.

I used to swipe 5-cent novels from Cherwood Moore's book store in Gallipolis. And play second mandolin in a dance orchestra. The front of the Paris opera makes me think of Lon Chaney. I confuse Norman Rockwell and Rockwell Kent. And Alice Brady and Florence Nash.

My wife hushes me up when I talk too much at parties with a funny sort of glance. It angers me, but I shut up. Somehow I often give people the impression I was once a devil of a fellow. My father-in-law never spoke to me until several months after I was married.

A derby is for some reason to me comic. Earl Carroll eats less than anyone I know. The finest stage setting this season was by Chamberlin Dodge in an unimportant play. I love thinly sliced cheese for breakfast. People have mistaken me for Tully Marshall.

I waltzed one night with Irene Castle, my entire conversation consisting of: "A marvelous orchestra." The most graphic underworld phrase is "giving him the heat," for assassination. Booth Tarkington sent me the only letter I ever kept—expressing sympathy for death of a dog.

The iciest looking men I ever saw are Charles W. Fairbanks and Charles Evans Hughes. I never enjoyed a tune more than "When You're Away," from "The Only Girl." Don't talk too much about yourself among strangers.

Don't direct conversation so that it gives you opportunity to relate some of your personal experiences.

Every person has taken part in unusual occurrences at some time. Your experiences of this sort may be of little importance when compared with those others might recall if so inclined.

At times you wonder why men you meet seem to care so little for you.

You do not understand why they display so little interest and do not care to continue the acquaintance.

Those who must advertise themselves have little to commend them.
